Our lives seemed to be ruled by numbers. We saw them in the select group of friends at the lunch table, the recorded statistics of a game, and the data our UbD, SAT, ACT, AP and ISTEP test scores generated. We planned our lives around those special dates: the big game, dances, and graduation.

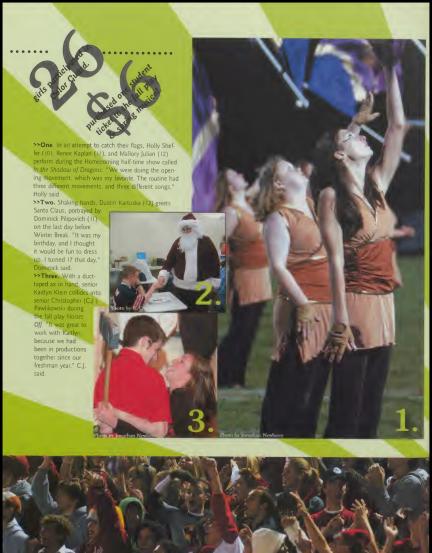

We felt the "numbers" pressing upon us as we walked alongside the 2,300 other students shuffling at different paces, facing different challenges, pondering different thoughts. If value was measured in a school population census, how nich would we be?

Numbers often defined who we were. From our class ranking, to the number of points we scored in a sporting event, to the amount of time spent in after-school events, to the amount of revenue we generated for fund-raisers numbers surrounded us.

-Story by Shannon Compton and Nicole Krnich! Design by Nicole Akey

It's all about

Even our everyday routines rotated around numbers. Depending on where we lived, we had to set our alarms for those early hours between 4:30 and 6:30 a.m. because the traffic was always backed up a half-way down Burrell Street. If we drove to school, we had to plan how long it would take us to get through the 4-way stop, park in our numbered spot, and walk from the parking lot to our 1st hour class by 7:25.

Within those first moments of thinking each morning, numbers had already invaded our thoughts before we even stepped into a mathematics or science classroom.

After attending the first three or four classes, we made our way to the cafeteria, paid $1.85 for lunch and tried to figure out if we could snag one of the eight seats available at the round tables. The last half of the day we spent waiting for that 2:27 bell and planning how we would spend our time after the school day.

Numbers...they defined us in so many ways. -By Nicole Akey

It was all about time. It was about the time to finish the loads of homework, the time to study for mandatory tests, the time to get ready for a dance, the time to show school spirit at a sporting event, the time to spend with friends, and most of all, the time to figure out how to fit everything in.

"Senior year was especially crazy," senior Jessica Kortas said. "With all the physics projects, the infamous Legacy Project, and all the college applications to fill out, plus working, I hardly had any time for myself or to hang out with friends."

But some students discovered that much-needed time for themselves, whether it was relaxing or spending time with friends and having fun.

"Going to dances was a great opportunity to have some fun with your friends," junior Matthew Lindgren said. "Even though it took time to get ready and plan everything out, the dances were worth it because it was always a blast."

Finding time, while difficult, was essential to surviving high school.

"With all the difficult classes and extracurricular activities, I definitely needed some time for myself," freshman Anna Bucci said.

Summer Fun

Students spend summer days enjoying free time

The last bell rang at 10:50 a.m. and students ran yelling and cheering out the doors into the bright sunshine and the eighty-degree temperature. Those who rode the bus sang from the windows, "School's Out for the Summer," as those in cars honked their horns and squealed their tires.

"I couldn't wait to hear that last and final bell," sophomore Sarah Jenkins said.

After the last day of school, senior Josh Mc-Collum began life-guarding at Lake of the Four Seasons Pool and also picked up a few hours at the newly opened Cold Stone Creamery.

"The Creamery was a new place and seemed like a fun place to work. Also, I really needed a job," Josh said.

While many students found summer employment, others took summer classes. Every year, a group of about twenty students traveled to Key Largo, Florida to earn a semester of science credit in marine biology.

While there, the students literally swam with the sharks. Junior Jennifer Wanatowicz joined her classmates on the trip.

"I loved it; it was everything I expected and more," Jen said. "My instructor woke up a sleeping shark, which was really scary."

Also hoping to enhance her education, junior Emily Mavrelis participated in the French foreign exchange program and spent a month in Montreal, Quebec with a family that barely spoke English.

"I learned so much, met some really cool people, and saw new things; it was a rocking time," she said.

Those involved in athletics had to schedule their summer vacations around practices and games, while a few students traveled for their teams. For example, Steve Albrecht visited Georgia for a basketball tournament and the girls' soccer team attended a camp at Indiana University in Bloomington.

"It was a good bonding experience," senior Ashley Dobbins said.

One student spent his summer coming to Crown Point. Senior Serge Mosendz moved from Vancouver, Canada.

All-Out Spirit

New teacher takes pie in the face

Early on the first Monday morning in October, a mass of red and white clothed bodies flooded the numerous high school doors. This could only mean one thing...Spirit Week.

With UbD exams the same week, the pep rally took place on Monday, instead of Friday once again. Spirited students anticipated the pep rally throughout every hour of the day because of the shortened class periods. Finally a voice came over the intercom, "It is now 1:55; all students may proceed to the gym for our Homecoming Pep Rally," school receptionist Karen Rodd said.

Singing the National Anthem, the Concert Choir kicked off the rally. Many clubs showed off their banners while marching around the gym, and the introduction of the Homecoming court followed. Finally, what everyone had been waiting for, the relay races, arrived.

Student Council members went head to head against the newly hired teachers promising the humiliating experience of being "pied" for losing. "I was afraid I was going to break Mr. (Clint)
Swan's nose when I smashed the pie in his face because there was barely any whip cream," senior Stacy Martin said.

With a pie-filled floor, the football players ended the rally singing the school song in front of the student body for the first time.

"It was nerve-racking to sing in front of everyone, but cool because I had never done it before," sophomore Mike Lipton said.

Everyday that passed during spirit week brought a different dress-up day. Pajama Day, one of the more popular days, took place on Thursday.

"I just wore to school what I wore to bed," junior Megan Tasher said.

Crazy-dressed students represented the excitement of Spirit Week.

Boys defeat Trojans 41 to 21, maintain winning streak

As the football moms tossed red and white beads into a crowd containing 5,500 plus fans, the seniors chanted "BJKI", the nickname of their beloved social studies teacher, Bernard John Kowlski. Mr. Kowalski acknowledged their shouts from the sidelines of the field.

A full moon hovered over the cleancut field as the undefeated football team prepared to face the Chesterton Trojans.

"Everyone was really anxious and ready to go," junior Scott Rutherford said. The first 12 minutes of the game

The first 12 minutes of the game proved to be a simple one for the players; they immediately took a 21-0 lead.

"I enjoyed the fact that we blew the other team away within the first quarter of the game," junior Kate Gardiner said.

After scoring 13 more points in the second quarter, the players left the field as the Homecoming queen nominees, dressed in formal attire, came forward.

As an eerie silence passed over the crowd as the nominees waited to see whose name would be called. Then, the silence shattered as Mr. Mike Malaski (English) announced "Natalie Polisson" as the new queen.

"It was a nice feeling to know that people thought enough of me to nominate me," Natalie said.

The players then returned to the field, scored seven more points and earned a 41-21 victory over the Trojans. At the same time, they managed to maintain their undefeated streak.

The dance team, along with students' moms, created a Winter Wonderland theme with blue and white decorations and ornaments. Each table was adorned with holiday ornaments and crystal candle sticks.

As the night went on, the DJ played fast-paced dance music along with a few slow, romantic songs, and threw out many door prizes into the crowd. People rushed to the front of the stage to grasp the inflatable guitars, sunglasses, glow sticks and beads.

"I spent $590 in total on Prom. My dress alone was $500, but everything else only cost $90," senior Kathryn Armenta said.

On the other hand, some Prom attendees decided to budget their money in a more economical way.

"I made my dress, and it only cost me about $50, and then, I only spent $44 on everything else, like nails, flowers and accessories," senior Sarah Board said.

Money was not the only thing that girls needed to budget. Time was an important factor in preparing for the big night.

"It took a whole three hours just to do my hair, and then it only took me twenty minutes to put on my dress, accessories, and apply my make-up," senior Mallory Julian said. Guys though were a different story.

Waking up in the morning on Saturday, May 12th, it was obvious that there could not have been a better day for prom. The solid 75 degree weather, blue skies, and deep green landscape proved the perfect backdrop for pre-prom pictures.

"My group met at my house for pictures before the grand march, and surprisingly, everyone was actually on time," senior Andrew Krumwied said.

After an hour or two of non-stop smiling, it was time for the dance to begin.

Crowned prom king and queen, seniors Josh Box and Shelly Kiefer had the first dance as seniors Christopher Johnson and Natalie Polisson sang the New Radicals song, "Someday We'll Know," while the rest of the attendees ate a dinner of roasted chicken, pasta, mashed potatoes, and corn. Then it was finally time for the dancing to begin.

"I loved how crowded the dance floor was," senior Katie Kvachkoff said. "Everyone was squashed together and dancing with everyone."

Around 9:45 p.m. the crowd began to thin as students headed their separate ways. Although some chose to stay local, many took the opportunity to head out and enjoy the night life in Chicago.

Double take

Student similarities trigger second glances

Did your friends constantly confuse you with a younger sibling? Did you have to search the comics to find your twin, or were you fortunate enough to resemble a celebrity?

Some students were able to find their lookalike in the hallways.

"People always confused me and my sophomore sister Sonya in the hallway. It was annoying," junior Lexie DuBernard said.

Siblings weren't the only people worthy of a double take.

"I thought Mr. (Kit) Degenhart (Drama) looked like Ben Affleck," junior Daniel Neill said.

One teacher even made a remark on a student's appearance.

"Mr. Rodriguez (Health) told me I looked like the kid (Edward Furlong) from The Terminator 2," sophomore Andrew Bocanegra said with a shrug. "I didn't even know who he was talking about."

In some instances, the resemblance proved comical. Junior Andy Misch was told that he resembled a certain clay character named Gumby.

"Gumby? I had never heard I looked like Gumby before then," Andy said.

"Actually, I thought that was pretty sweet."

Whether students traveled 3,951 miles to London, England, took a day trip to Chicago, or went a couple of miles from the downtown square, students found a way to entertain themselves during school vacations.

The Wermers family, junior Kurt, freshman Brenna, and the assistant principal's secretary Mrs. Melissa Wermers and her husband traveled to London, England, for a family vacation.

The Wermers toured castles, Stonehenge, and went to see the musical Spamalot.

"I really loved all the history of England," Brenna said. "There were many things there that were around before America even existed."

Some of the cheerleaders traveled domestically to compete in a national competition.

"I went to cheerleading nationals held in Kissimmee, Florida," freshman Melissa Monix said.

Freshman Elizabeth Phillips also traveled 1242 miles from Crown Point to Kissimmee, but not for a competition.

"I went on vacation with family friends," Elizabeth said. "We went to Universal Studios for two days, and then we all went to Venice, Florida, to spend time at the beach."

Staying a little closer to home, junior Sarah Shaabaan traveled the 47 miles to the Windy City.

"My siblings and I toured the Museum of Science and Industry. We got to see Body Worlds. It was a great way to spend time together."

Other students did not leave the county. They had to work r finish projects for school.

"I did not have time to do anything else during Spring Break because of a project I had to do for her honors English class." Sarah added.

Senior Lindsey Clemens spent her week doing her favorite hobby, painting with acrylic.

"During Spring Break, I started a mural that I dedicated to my friends," Lindsey said. Junior Ellen Kapitan stayed at the school, and practiced for track.

"It (practice) was really tough. It was unseasonably cold out, and I had to get up really early."

data

The success of students was calculated by data. Six weeks test scores, Core 40 testing results, SAT averages, and results of other tests averaged into data-rates, percentages, and ratios. Administrators and teachers then compared this data to other students and schools in the state and nation.

We landed statistically in the top quartile of Indiana

We landed statistically in the top quartile or indiana schools for the majority of our data according to the Department of Education.

We had a 96% attendance rate, a graduation rate of 93%, a 73.6% college attendance rate, an average 1038 composite SAT score with 70% of seniors taking the SAT, and 79% of students passing ISTEPs in both English and mathematics. In addition, 29% of seniors received an academic honors diploma.

An increased amount of students also took advanced placement tests. About 15% of students tested, and 62% of those received a three of out the possible five. Teachers adhered to state standards in each class often indicating the specific standard being met by a delineation of letters and numbers next to specific test questions, projects or assignments.

Furthermore, six weeks testing, called UbD's, accounted for 20.5% of each six week grade.

"I had better grades my freshman year because there weren't any UbDs to bring down my grade," senior Alex Nelson said. "But I had to take so many tests, I got better at them."

"I think the UBD's were good. During the six weeks, if you actually paid attention, the UBD could bring up your grade," sophomore Ahmed Elshity said.

Core 40 testing occurred in May causing the library to close for most of the month. In addition to the subjects of math and English, sciences, like physics and biology, were included in the computer-generated test.

While unique assignments appeared in classrooms every day, Mrs. Deb Ciochina instructed her advanced placement, senior English class to take what they had in the class room and reach out to the community. The main goal of the project was for seniors to personally relate to and impact their surrounding neighborhoods.

Seniors Shannon Blazek and Courtney Rowe planned to impact the community through two aspects of human life, music and food. The two girls decided to hold a food drive concert at the fairgrounds where admission would be granted to those who donated canned goods.

"The community experienced new creative ways of helping the families in need," Shannon said.

For seniors Bobby Ferrell-Brey and Corey Hill, music also tied into their plans of making a lasting impression on the community. They hosted a one-hour singing session for the special-needs students during the school day.

"I had been a peer tutor in the past, and when I saw the happiness on their faces from a simple acknowledgement it made any amount of work worth while," Bobbie said.

The students that participated learned lyrics to well-known songs, such as the Electric Slide, Love Shack, The Hustle, and the Chicken Dance. After attending these sessions, all special-needs students that participated had the opportunity to perform for their families. They were also given the option of performing during their annual spring fling dance.

"I thought this project would encourage other schools to teach dance and other activities for the special needs students," Corey said, "I felt it was important to include everyone from school in everything."

Government and sociology state standards were met as school requirements through community service. Sophomore Casey Taylor helped with the Special Olympics as part of her community service hours. It was her second year helping with the event.

"It was hard work, and a lot of fun," Casey said. "It was a really great experience."

Ten out of ten students said the 40-hour graduation requirement was a good idea for several reasons.

"It was a good way to get kids involved in the community," freshman Book Fargo said.

Also, most students agreed that it looked good on college applications.

"It kept kids out of trouble," freshman Jeremy Nikolich said.

Allison Newlin completed some of her hours at the court house. She was Santa's helper, and distributed candy canes to little children. Freshman Alexandra Horst completed 16 hours of community service while helping with a kidney fund. She did odd jobs preparing the day before and the day of the fund-raiser event. ling more zero hour Students report need

More than half of the student body went to either their own teachers' or other teachers' classrooms during zero period each week. Some students believed that although they had from 7:00 a.m. to 7:20 a.m., zero period was not long enough for them to get everything finished.

"Zero period should have been longer, because I usually had just begun to understand a concept and then the bell would ring," senior Sarah Board said. Although they had on average 20 minutes, teachers were so busy on certain days that not all students were able to get help.

"So many kids tried to get help from one teacher, and sometimes you waited the whole time and never got the help you needed," junior Hailey Hardin said.

Other students talked to their friends in the library, sat in the cafeteria, or just roamed around the school until zero period ended.

"The worst thing about zero period when you walked around was the people who stood in the middle of the hallways," senior Olivia Bowman said.

When students needed time to take make-up tests or quizzes, and class time wasn't enough, zero period provided a good opportunity.

"I didn't have enough time at night to finish my homework, so the next morning gave me some time," junior Aimee Favia said.

"Zero period gave me more time to relax and prepare for first hour," senior Rachel VanDeWyngaerde said.

Not all students arrived for zero hour, coming one or two minutes before the first hour tardy bell rang.

electives draw student interest

As course selection came around every year, students studied their catalogs to create the schedule that most appealed to them. Some were surprised to notice the changes and new additions of AP Statistics, AP Environmental Science, and Personal Fitness.

Struck by curiosity, several of these students chose to take on a first-year elective course, proving the year to be different from previous ones.

"I figured AP Statistics would differ from a normal math course. Analyzing and studying probability and statistics was different than any other math course I have taken," senior Micah Palmateer said.

Sometimes, an interest in other hobbies could lead to the courses one chose in school.

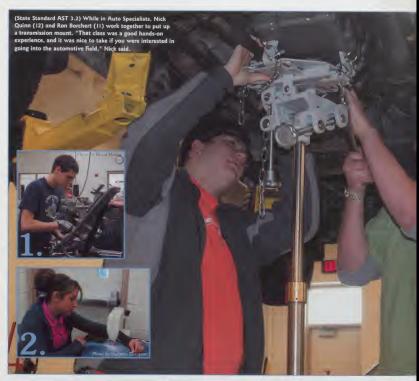

"I thought AP Statistics would be an easy advanced placement class because there were a lot of statistics in sports, so I figured I would like it," junior Matt Childress said.

While any new course could be difficult for students, AP Statistics also challenged math teacher Mr. Steve Strayer as well

"The class was challenging because I was learning the material with the students as went through the school year," Mr. Strayer said. "I made mistakes, but that didn't bother me too much because I enjoyed the students that were in the class."

Roboaogs competition inspires teamwork

Vocational classes brought hands-on experience to a new level with the introduction of Robodogs, a hybrid cross between classroom work and an extracurricular club. Robodogs was the name of the team which created and then competed with a working robot.

First, the engineering and drafting class worked on the design for a robot. Machine shop created and assembled the pieces, and finally computer technology programmed the robot. The Robodogs also met after school daily.

"The main reason we picked up this program was to nspire teamwork among students," Mr. Mark Querry (Industrial Arts) said.

The Robodogs competed with their robot at the first

Robotics competition. At the competition, they used the robot to complete a series of tasks for which they were awarded points. However, the bigger point of the program was to achieve excellence in design and demonstrate team spirit, according to the team members.

"It was really cool seeing how something you had built ran and performed," senior Matt Pogozcewski said.

The club provided an avenue for those interested in combining computer skills and mechanical skills.

"I joined the Robodogs because I had been interested in engineering for a long time, and I also flew remote control airplanes, so I had previous experience in control use," senior Matt Osojnicki said. By Devin Holme

Legacy project, grades create concerns

"I worked on all of the homework from my AP (advanced placement) classes until about one a.m., but receiving an 'A' in every class was definitely worth it," Abdullah Malik (11) said.

The students were expected to work hard in school and donate extra time and energy outside of school for the opportunity to receive weighted grades.

Latin students were very familiar with the benefit of weighted grades. In previous years, both third and fourth year students had a GPA based on a five point scale. However, this year was much different. Because many students and teachers deemed it unfair that other foreign languages did not have two years of weighted grades, none of the Latin students were granted AP credit. A plan existed that would reinstate weighted grades for fourth year Latin students only in years to come.

On the other side of the building, however, AP English Language students were busy doing interviews, researching different aspects of the area, and putting together the new Legacy Book.

"Legacy was a lot of work, but I found out I was more capable than I thought I was," Jake Nyenhuis (12) said.

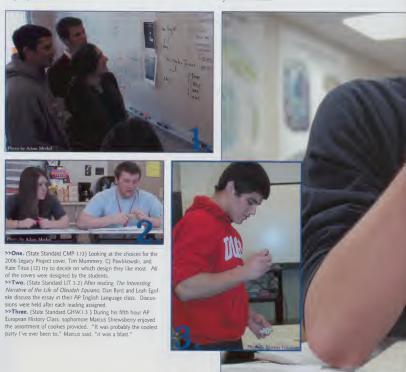

The Legacy Back forward not only on the rest of war was like.

The Legacy Book focused not only on the past of our area, like previous books had done, but the present and future as well.

"Every class on my schedule was AP because I wanted to be my class's valedictorian," Jon Glass (11) said.

Freshmen surprisingly dominated the crowded hallways as the largest class with 614 students. Seniors were the smallest class with only 532 students, some of which graduated at semester.

"It was scary to think that the treshman outnumbered us," senior Ana Radiceska said.

The significant influx of students in the freshman class caused the school to grow from approximately 2,200 to 2,300 in one year. The large number of students affected everyone's school day, from the hallways to the classrooms.

"Hallways were much more difficult to walk down," senior Becky Asher said. "It was challenging to get through, especially during lunch times."

After asking band members to use their band lockers for the first semester and unassigning senior HERO members lockers, 198 new lockers were installed.

"Since my band locker was so far away, I was always late to class," junior Stacy Clark said. /"My teachers usually gave me a break though. I was really glad when I got a new locker because I no longer had to walk so far. and I wasn't late anymore."

Since the school was rapidly growing, it forced everyone to rapidly adapt.

friends forever and ever

Seniors Kristie Deedrick, Shaun McFarland, Olivia Bowman remain friends from middle school through high school Spending most of their time talking about music, and school events, Kristie Deedrick, Shaun McFarland, and Olivia Bowman have been inseparable for the past five years.

"I've known Olivia for thirteen years and Kristie for about five," senior Shaun McFarland said, "I actually met Olivia on the playground in kindergarden."

As years went by they learned more and more about the value of friendship and the qualities needed to make a friendship work.

"I believe friends should be caring, nice and loving with each other and concernedwith feelings," Olivia Bowman said.

Olivia and Shaun did not let the miles between their houses keep them from helping a friend.

"This one time, Olivia and Shaun walked all the way to my house to make me feel better when I was sick," senior Kristie Deedrick said.

How did you get to dance the Nutcracker? : "I began one year by attending the auditions when I was nine. After becoming a member of the company, I had auditioned for all the shows after. That was my seventh Nuteracker, having performed thein every year except 2000 from when I was nine.

: Describe the experience. "A lot of hours, hard work, aches and pains, and lack of sleep was involved. You created friends with those you danced with, and it was ofcourse fun to do. You also became an example for all the younger dancers with big aspirations."

What did you do in the Nutcracker? "While there is obviously a lot of dancing, acting skills were also required to tell the story without words. You rehearse like crazy up until the shows; then you put a smile on and just relax and have a

Why did you choose to dance? : "I had been dancing since I was three, so I can't imagine my life without it. It had become part of who I am, and I was constantly doing it. Also, on the bright side it was great exercise."

Where did you practice? When? "I became a member of the Indiana Ballet Theatre Northwest and danced at Imperial Dance Studio (now the Academy of the Indiana Ballet Theatre.) I still dance there and had also danced with Civic Dance Center in Portage, in I was dancing at least four up to seven days a

You went to Washington D.C., why and when?

: "I went to Washington D.C. for the NYLF ((Nation Youth Leadership Forum) on Law. 1 anted to 20 to learn more about the legal rofessions and what types of careers were offered. 1 went from October 31st to November 5th."

Would you go again? Why or why not?

: "Yes, it really gave me and idea about what I was etting myself into. I got to see memorials that hadn't seen before; and I not only learned a lot about law, but history and society as well."

t was your learning experience from this trip? "Leadership qualities and people skills, You were thrown into a group of people you didn't ate, and stayed up all night working on projects

Are you interested in the law field now because of the trip? : "I thought I wanted to be practicing in the court room, but I learned about a different direction that interested me more; entertainment/intellectual property law, working with actors and musicians."

How did this trip help you overall?

. "It gave me a better understanding concerning what I wanted to do with my life. I learned so much! I learned more about the rocess of Supreme Court hearings vs. federal ones. I decided that I want to go into music education, teach for awhile, then go back to law school,"

: Why did you want to go skydiving and who did you go with?

> : "I wanted to see what it was like to fly and it seemed like a thrill. I went with my mom, my two brothers, and my brother's girlfriend."

: What clothes and safety equipment did you have wear?

: "They made me wear a full jumpsuit, harness, and parachute."

: What was your favorite part of your whole skydiving experience?

: "Jumping out of the plane was definitely my favorite thing. It was so cool the way your stomach dropped completely."

; How long were you actually skydiving for?

: "The free fall is 60 seconds, however, you can only feel it for 9 seconds. In all, you're in the air for 6 whole minutes."

: When you finally reached the ground was the

: "It was a smooth landing, but the harness kind of rode up during the ride down."

: Is skydiving anything you would do again in your life and why?

: "Skydiving was an amazing experience, and I would love to do it again!" : What was your band's name and who was in it? What was the most important to the band?

: "The name of our band was Seven ATE Nine. Jake Anderson (10) and two other students from a different school were in our band. The most important thing

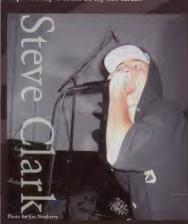

: What was your biggest influence?
: "My dad used to listen to the same music, and it was nice to have a good influence in your life; it helped me do good things."

was making music and writing new songs."

: Was music inspiring to you?
: "It was. It helped me a lot.
If I was in a cruddy mood, I listened to songs that expressed the same feelings I had. If I was angry, the metal and screaming helped me cope with it, especially listening to the inspiring lyrics. Most people thought that kind of music was like 'die, die, die', but it was actually very inspirational."

Did you want to continue on with a career in music?

"Music was pretty much my life. I had other things I did, but when I was screaming in front of a crowd, the rush of 30-45 fans enjoying my band's music was awesome. I hope one day it could be my life career."

: Why did you become a model?
: "When I was 13, my parents wanted to make me more of a lady, so I suggested modeling.
On Saturdays, I would go to a class and learn to apply make-up, walk, and talk. Then, I started doing pageantry and talking to agents."

: What was your favorite memory from modeling?
: "I was at a shoot, and we were outside. I was wearing four-inch heels in a big mass of weeds and pipes. The photographer told me to walk along the pipes in my heels! All was fine and dandy until I slipped while walking and fell into the bushes."

: How did you stay in shape?
: "I watched what I ate and worked out to burn 300-500 calories everyday. I even had to invent new recipes for low calorie food. If models didn't fit a certain body type and size they would most likely not get the job."

: Why did you enjoy modeling?
: "Modeling gave me an inner fire, a sense of self, and an identity that is mine because I am loved for who I am."

take singing lessons?

1 'Pe been singing since before I knew how to talk. It's what I love to do. I've also been taking singing lessons for 3 years now from Rebecca Osbourne.

: What musical productions have you been in?

: I've been in Fiddler on the Roof,
God Spell, and Hello Dolly.

: What's the hardest part about being a singer?
: I think that staying healthy and taking care of my vocal cords are the hardest parts.

: How many days a week do you spend singing or practicing?
: I have lessons once a week, but other than that I sing all the time unconsciously, such as in the shower, on the phone, or at the dimer table.

A When you are performing do you ever become nervous?

I become nervous and get scared that I will forget the words. If this happens I take deep breaths and I don't think about it.

: What's your favorite part about singing and performing?

1 love the thrill it gives you while performing, the feeling of accomplishments.

: What made you join paint balling? : "My dad and cousins played and they got me into the sport. Paint ball was a major part of my life."

: What type of competitions had you competed in? Where? : "I competed in local and national tournaments. Locally, I played at the Bandlandz in Crete, IL. I had also played in Chicago and Florida in national competitions."

: Did you have a team sponsor? : "I had an individual sponsorship with Badlandz and Bad Boyztoyz."

What type of equipment did you use? : "I used an '05 Proto Matrix. You absolutely had to wear a mask. But I took it one step further and wore a jersey, arm and knee pads, and cleats to get better traction."

: Have you ever been hurt during a match or competition? : "I had never actually been hurt, but I did get welts from being shot. For beginners in the sport, being shot hurts, but after playing for so long you get used to it. "

What made you interested in hunting? : "My family had always hunted, so I decided to try it. I have been hunting ever since I was five."

Where do you hunt at? : "We own about 150 acres of land around my house. There we set up fake deer and tree stumps to practice on. We also traveled around the area trying different places."

: Had you ever been involved in any hunting competitions? If so, what kind? Did you win any prizes or place? : "I had been in Blythe's largest deer competition. I didn't place, but did win a bow and))arrow, along with some clothing, for my participation."

: What type of equipment did you use? : "I wore camo and anything other clothing that helped me blend in with my surroundings."

friends forever and ever

Strong and loving bonds between friends creates long-lasting friendship between three freshmen Since seventh grade Ellen Campbell, Mike Laus and Jessica Fornof built a strong friendship. They have been best friends with each over the years.

"Mike came up to me one day in the hall and told me he wanted to be friends, so ever

Jessica met Ellen in Mrs. Bradford's choir class during seventh grade one day. Afterwards, they started talking to each other for awhile and the friendship blossomed

During their free time, they liked to hang out at each others' houses. Jessica and Ellen spend most of their time together participating in mixed, show, and intermediate choirs. They practiced singing together to get ready for ISSMA, which is a state choir competition. Also, they played tennis togethe

: Did you sew professionally or as a hobby?

: "I did both. Professionally, I owned a business called Meadowbrook Bridal where I designed and sewed gowns for weddings and proms. Then, I started costuming stage productions - mainly full length ballets such as Cinderella and The Nuteracker. Indiana Ballet Theatre NW still uses the costumes at this time."

: What were some interesting projects that you have completed?
: "My favorite was a silver lame prom gown that she (the student) wanted to look like a seashell. I even made her gloves and her date's bow tie and cummerbund.

That was creative and fun."

: Didn't you have another type of career before you became a teacher?

: "You must be asking about my years as an architectural drafter. My original Bachelor's degree was in interior design from Penn State. I drew and designed foundations for steel mills for almost 7 years. I have also been an art teacher here at CPHS."

: Why did you decide to only teach English and not art?

: "I quit teaching art when one of my students glued his unsuspecting friend to a stool with rubber cement." : What made you want to be involved with this school?

: "The seriousness. I didn't want to go to a school that was not serious about teaching."

: How did it feel to be a new teacher?

: "It was weird at first. I didn't look at myself as a higher authority; just someone to help.

At the beginning of the day, I felt I had done nothing, but at the end of the day, I felt I had done something great and accomplished something important."

: What methods did you use to make learning more fun and enjoyable?

: "Marker boards and illustrative activities. I would put a sound track on and act to it."

: Why did you choose to become a teacher?

I'To help people understand.

A lot of people try to persuade others through words. I felt I could do two things; I could persuade people by being an example, and I could teach curriculum that goes with my culture. I felt Spanish was important and understanding the culture was too."

Athletic Director retires after forty years

"I'll never forget how fortunate I have been in having association with the students and faculty at CPHS," Athletics Director Jerry Caravana said while reflecting on his past forty years.

At the beginning of the year Mr. Caravana announced his retirement after spending his career teaching business law and management and serving as the athletic director.

"It's like anything else, Caravana said. I've been here for forty years. It was time to retire."

In his career, Mr.Caravana lived through many changes at the school. Although the buildings have changed, he claims the students have not.

"I've found that the kids don't change. Students have the same desires and aspirations as they did forty years ago. The only thing that has changed is their toys," Mr. Caravana said.

Mr. Mike Malaski (English), who was appointed Athletic Director next year, said he will be missed greatly.

"Mr. Caravana was a great athletic director, and he has made an important impact on Crown Point High School. He will always be remembered as a great man," Mr. Malaski said.

Team 15th (State): Prior to winter break, Josh McCollum (12) swims the breast stroke at a Wednesday afternoon practice. The team usually swam a set of fast laps first followed by a slower- paced set. "We practiced everyday before and after school. It was a rigorous schedule, but I loved every minute of it. Since we were seniors, it was even better because all of the underclassmen respected us," Josh said. The team won 3rd at sectionals and placed 3rd in the DAC.

Statistics, averages, personal records, and wins versus loses predicted the success of each team. These numbers were extremely valued; they calculated the accomplishments and the faults of the entire team and each individual member.

The pressure to achieve high scores and averages stressed many athletes.

"Sometimes, it didn't matter if we won a game or not," senior Mike Kmice said. "If we played badly but still won the game, we were punished during practice. Every member of the team had to work as hard as they could."

However, these statistics also translated into success.

For example, the varsity football team advanced to regionals with an undefeated record, but lost to LaPorte 21-28.

Also in the fall, for the first time in eight years, the girls' cross country team claimed the sectional title. In addition, the varsity boys' tennis team sent senior doubles partners Nick Maddalone and Alex Tsikouris down state where they took first in the at regionals and advanced to the state competition, and on the green, senior golf player Terra Miller won third in state, a personal best.

During the winter, the boys' hockey team tied a game one weekend in the final competition, then pushed through and won state the following weekend in Indianapolis. For the girls gymnastics team, senior Martina Buchholz earned the sectional all around runner up and regional runner up title on the balance beam. Her scores helped the team finish the regional competition with a record-breaking score of 109,225.

In the spring, the boys' varsity baseball team earned a first place state ranking from the Indiana High School Baseball Coaches Association.

10-2 (Team Record): Jeremy Pogorzelski (10), an athlete in varsity wrestling, braces himself for his second round of the wrestling match against his Merrillville opponent.

Team 3rd (Sectionals): While practicing before competing against Lake Central's gymnastics team, Martina Buchholz (12) climbs on the uneven bars to loosen up.

2 points: During a Special Olympics Basketball game against Lowell, Rob Thurman (12) performs a victory dance after shooting a basket and making two points.

Number 20: With her coach beside her, Brittany Clements (12) catches her breath as she waits until she is called into the Hebron versus Crown Point basketball game.

varsity team maintains undefeated season

captures sectional win, takes duneland conference

Fans sat on the edges of their seats biting their nails with turning stomachs as they watched in horror at what almost ended up as the final game of the season.

With Portage leading 7-0 and only one quarter to go, the players found themselves in new,

"When it got into the fourth quarter and we hadn't scored, I was worried, but I knew we would find a way to win," senior Ryan Forney said.

Amazingly, breaking six tackles in 43 yards, senior Jon Sertich scored the first touchdown of the fourth quarter making way for sophomore Mike Lipton to score a field goal and tie the game.

"Scoring the first touchdown was indescribable; I felt like I was on cloud nine," Jon said.

A sudden change of facial expressions overcame the crowd as Mr. Mike Malaski (English) announced the game's extension into overtime.

Portage, up first, scored a touchdown earning a kick, which happened to bounce off the goal

Finally, as the bright lights shined down onto the field, Ryan Forney attempted Coach Croell's favorite trick play. "I wasn't nervous. I was more confident we'd find a way to win." Ryan said.

Mike Lipton then stepped up to kick a field goal that would ultimately lead to a victory.

"I knew that it would come down to a game winning kick. I knew I had to get the job done," Mike said.

The varsity football players, as DAC and sectional champs, pulled through in one of the closest sectional games.

"I had to stand there and take it all in. Senior year... you never know if you'll get to experience that again. There's nothing like high school football," Ryan said. By Brittany Kaminsky and Milijana Trisic

"I blacked out, I didn't remember anything from that game," junior Scott Rutherford said. His intention of defending against the Hobart Brickies played out differently than he planned.

"I went to block a punt and got kicked in the throat," he said. "I went to the sideline, hyperventilated and collapsed."

As Scott lay on the ground unconscious, half-time approached along with an ambulance. After he arrived at the hospital, he waited through x-rays and test results.

"I had fluid in the soft tissue of my neck, bruises on my tract, and compressed blood vessels which caused me to black out in the first place," he said.

A week after the hospital visit, Scott warmed the bench during practices.

However, for the next week's game, he appeared back on the field ready to despite new rivals, drastic weather girls' golf team sends one to state

It is three o'clock on a cold. grey afternoon and the girls' golf team gathers on the course, talking on cell phones and waiting for Coach Scott Vlink. They are comfortable with each other and obviously close, but the season was coming to an end.

The girls, bundled in sweatshirts, decided they'd rather play a 'scramble' game instead of a round in the cold.

"In our first tournament, it was extremely hot and we had to adjust to the weather," junior Marissa Williams said.

However, by sectional and regional time, it was drastically colder.

They experienced other challenges across the board, not just the weather

"We had to play in new tournaments, and we had different rivals; we never had to worry about Lake Central before," junior Kara Ingelhart said.

At sectionals, the team finished second, and continued on to regionals.

"We had a productive season and we built up a strong team, and of course, Terra will be missed," Kara said.

Terra Miller, the team's only senior, qualified for the state competition for the fourth year in a row and finished, for the first time, in third place.

"As a senior, I took more time during the season to really enjoy it," Terra said. "I was really proud to qualify for the second day of the state competition."

Even with new team members the girls managed to bond.

"Everybody was friends and it was a great group of girls to play with for a few months," junior Nicci Brown said. "We were always consistent and had a great attitude."

Not surprisingly, the weather played an important factor for golf matches "When the weather was hot, no one played well," Marissa said, "Learning to adjust to weather was one of the biggest issues."

>Two. In the middle of her swing, Meredith Malczewski (11) demonstrates the basic golf fundamentals by bending her knees, rotating her hips and keeping her golf. It was always something really upbeat like Britney Spears," Meredith said. Meredith played in the team fourth spot for every meet, except for one, in which sto played in the team's third spot

>>Two. At a Youchee Country Club meet, Mary Haynes (11) follows her drive. Haynes played on the team for three years and said she enjoyed it because of the people she met. "It was fun to play a sport you liked, especially when you could play with other people who enjoyed it also." Long golf practices were never an issue for the team members according to Mary. "The girls on the team were always fun to talk to, and it was a great way to socialize," she said.

>>Three. While visualizing her next shot, Lauren Bryner (10) develops her plan of attack. "I tried to think about happy and calm thoughts to make sure I didn't get mad at myself and mess up," Lauren said. She occasionally filled in on the team's rotating fifth spot.

>>Four. During her follow through, Laura Dexter (9) watches her drive fly toward the flag. "I played junior varsity on both the soccer and the golf teams, so it was hard but fun," she said. "My favorite match was the first time I scored a fifty on nine holes."

>>Five. Hoping to score at or close to par, Lauren Slosson
(9) attempts to sink her putt. She played in the rotating fifth position on the team.

>>Six. Pleased with the direction and velocity of the ball Karly Wasowski (II) holds her stance. Karly was new to the team and the school. "I knew what to expect since I played on the golf team at Penn High School," Karly said. Karly held the second highest spot on the team

>>Four. Jayson Scheutz (12) tees off on the 18th hole. "The worst part about away matches was getting home really late from long drives." Jayson said. "But before the matches, I would prepare by putting and chipping for a few minutes and swing a few clubs before tee off." Jayson's score was a 92

>>Five. While listening to his iPod, losh Black (11) putts off to the side of the green. "The hardest part about golf was forgetting about a bad round and just playing the next." Josh said. "I would, however, put my iPod on shuffle and just go with the music; that helped." At the KV Invite, the team stroke total was 354- placing the team in 4th place.

>>Six, Chipping out of the rough to get onto the green. Tyler Bowdish (9) watches his shot at Pheasant Valley in a match versus Chesterton. *Coach Kutemeier's advice was pretty much 'You know my expectations, and you know what you guys can do, so do it," Tyler said. boys' golf team makes the putt, place third in sectionals qualify for regionals Sixten members and two coaches, this was what the boys' golf team worked with during the season. From freshman to seniors, drives, sinks and puts, golf proved to be more than a mental game. Every aspect counted, whether it was course conditions, trying to improve a score, or maintaining the lead.

"Every game in golf was equally difficult," junior Nico Drakulich said. "It was all a state of mind."

"We began practicing in April for the spring season," senior Will Theodoros said. "We would play nine holes at Pheasant Valley, which was our home course."

Other courses included Palmira, Michigan City and Highland.

"Palmira was the hardest because of course management," junior Ryan Levin said. "Michigan City was the easiest because it was an easier mindset."

"My personal best was 42, but I could have done better," Ryan said.

"Mine was 40, but there was always room for improvement," Nico said.

Improving also meant help from many

"My dad really helped me out a lot; yet, I never really felt that you had to be brought up in the game of golf to enjoy it. You could learn to love it."

Theodoros, the team's number one player with an average of 38, was on the team for four years.

"Will has been a good leader," head coach Del Kutemeier said. "He is a good person and great team player."

As for the underclassmen looking up to the upperclassmen?

"The underclassmen always look up to older team members- that's important," Kutemeier said

Sophomore Nikola Pusara agreed.
"Will helped me a lot in my technique and swing," Nikola said. "He critiqued me a lot."

The team placed third in the sectionals and qualified for regionals.

sidelined, on field, at sleep overs Soccer girls create long-lasting memories

By Olivia Abbott

Considering Coach Mike Malaski's stringent routines during practices, surprisingly, the girls reported that they seldom ever even thought about giving up. With a winning record and an abundance of team spirit, the girls brought home a winning record.

"It was like a fist fight on the field; you had to be ready every game," junior Megan Tasher said.

To get ready, the team conditioned using some unusual techniques. For example, they ran suicide drills timed to recorded beeps and ran back and forth down the field.

"The beep test was my favorite; you'd run until you couldn't beat the beep'," Tasher said.

Concerning the NIPSCO box, they had a funny saying about that drill. As a form of "attitude or language" correction, the girls were required to move as quickly as possible to the NIPSCO box located past the baseball field and near the woods.

"If you let your lips go, you'd run a NIPSCO. I know it sounds silly, but it really worked!" Tasher said.

Although the girls would not miss the suicide drills, they related the aspects of the season they would miss.

"The bonding! We had the best times- like the bus rides, workouts in the muddy rain..." senior Ashley Dobbins said.

"Don't forget the sleep overs!" cut-in junior Natalie Spork.
"We loved every second of it," added sophomore Brooke Hruby.

The girls looked around at one another with exhausted pride on their last sectional game. It was 2-0 overtime and Lake Central had the lead. Unfortunately, time ran out and the girls lost

"It was such a gruesome game and we played our hearts out," Tasher said. "It was a really big game, it was tough," sophomore Alex Firchau said.

The game being Dobbins' last, brought her much sadness. "I was a soccer player for 11 years, and now I was not a soccer player anymore," she said.

Intensity was in the air and the girls were ready to play. They had an undefeated title to defend, and they believed Munster would be a challenge.

"I love watching you win, and I hate watching them win," Coach Annie Domasica said to her girls before they stepped on the field to play the Munster Mustangs. Ms. Domasica was an alumni of Munster.

"We knew that they would be one of the hardest JV teams that we'd have to play, so every chance counted," sophomore Hannah Jaranowski said.

The game was all tied up until Munster struck first with a goal to take the lead. "It made me feel a little disappointed, but it also gave me the courage to score a goal," sophomore Alexis Villareal said.

After half time ended, the girls tied the game up again.

"We'd had never trailed another team, so once we scored, it made everyone work harder to win after being behind," Hannah said.

With the momentum on their side, they quickly moved the ball up the field, and in a matter of minutes, they had taken the lead.

"It was never fun being down, but it was exciting because it gave us the opportunity to prove how good we were," Coach Domasica said.

The girls came out on top beating Munster with a score of 2-1; they ended their season only surrendering one loss to Valparaiso.

"This was one of the best teams I was part of because all of the girls had good attitudes as well as good characters," Coach Domasica said.

Coach Domasica's team was not the only team that had a successful season. The freshman team, coached by Coach Nicole Nowaczyk, also had a victorious season.

during jv, freshman soccer season

By Marissa Feliciano

Two players, juniors Jerry Hendrickson and Benjamin Friedman, both on varsity, simultaneously attempted to go after a loose ball both considered to be theirs.

The wind made it difficult to tell which direction the ball was headed, but Jerry, determined to go for a header, concentrated on the ball, unaware that his teammate had the same idea.

"I was very concentrated on the ball and didn't even see that my teammate was there. I thought he was an opponent," Jerry said.

Jerry was also too intent on the ball to hear Benjamin shout "Got it!"

"I was already into the air, and I 'headed' Jerry's head and the ball," Friedman said.

"I fell on my back, and my head hit the ground. I was disoriented for about 20 seconds or so," Jerry said.

As for the JV team, sophomore Jason Ban experienced the joy of success and the pain of an embarrassing moment at the Rensselaer game. It seemed that Jason's extra amount of enthusiasm was not appreciated by officials.

"I was taken out of the game for taking my shirt off after scoring against Rensselaer," Iason said.

In another embarrassing situation, sophomore Jonathon Sergent simply found himself face down in a mud puddle.

"Everyone was trying to avoid the puddle, but I dove right into it," Jon said.

"We did what we had to do," Sadie said. "We went in knowing that we wanted to win."

Running ahead on that chilly Tuesday afternoon, the team mantra included what they told each other before the race: "We deserve this."

"When I crossed the [finish] line, it was a good moment," Sadie said. "It was a good moment with my parents, teammates and coaches because I knew we'd won sectionals."

coaches because I knew we'd wor sectionals."

Claiming the sectional title for the first time in eight years, the girls attributed their success to hard practices and increased individual improvement.

"I enhanced my skills by a lot," freshman Ksenia Pilarski said. "I cut at least two minutes off of my time."

"This season was definitely a success," junior Jenn Bane said.

"Our season consisted of a lot more mileage," sophomore Rachel Kolavo said.

Beginning to prepare for a tough season, the team began conditioning and practicing in the summer. Even with senior leaders, there was always room for the underclassmen to boost their running abilities.

"I ran on my own to improve, and I liked all of the practices we ran," sophomore Maggie Schwuchow said. "The hardest practices were the best because they were rewarding."

"I really stepped it up because I was more focused, and I knew that people would look to me," Maggie said.

As the season began and summer conditioning ended, both girls' teams had been in full force preparing themselves. Preseason consisted of six-hour-long practices, weight lifting and plenty of sprints, according to the team members.

"We were probably one of the best conditioned teams on the court because Coach (Ginger) Keithley loved to make us run," sophomore Samantha Lamantia said.

Team chemistry also played an important role in the girls' experiences as well.

"The girls were some of the best people I have met; you could always count on having fun on and off the court, even if you were having a bad day," freshman Brenna Wermers said.

The coach and the players thought that Toni Fackler, contributed to their success.

As a pregame ritual, the girls went out to eat and talked to each other about game strategy. Also, in the team huddle, before each match, sophomore Clare Grubnich led the team chant, "Go, Go Bulldoss," while the rest of the girls clapped their hands.

The younger team members said they received inspiration and support from those on the varsity squad, especially junior Stacy Qualizza and senior Katie Kyachkoff.

"Even if they were upperclassmen, they made every player feel like part of the team by having such positive attitudes," Brenna said.

winning sectionals, snagging titles key wrestling members support family tradition

By Marissa Feliciano

When it came to choosing a sport, sophomore Nick Bruno and senior Ryan Gill chose wrestling because of family tradition

In Nick's family, his two older brothers were wrestlers.

"I joined back when I was about five years old because my two brothers did it, and I wanted to be just like them. So, I haven't stopped since," Nick said.

Nick believed that he made his brothers proud with his performance on the mat.

"We won the Stagg Tournament as a team, and I won my first tourney in two years," Nick said. "I took first at the C.P. Carnahan Tournament, which turned out to be my last match of the season."

After the Carnahan Tournament, Nick had to stop wrestling for medical reasons.

"I had to stop because I had been wrestling with a broken bone in my wrist," Nick said. "I had to have surgery done on it."

Ryan Gill also joined the wrestling team out of family tradition. It wasn't about his brothers, though; it was about carrying on his father's legacy.

"My dad wrestled in high school, and I wanted to carry it on." Ryan said.

Ryan's father shared many wrestling stories with him over the years.

"It was nice to hear his stories and be able to relate, and maybe someday I can share my father's and my wrestling stories with my son," Ryan said.

Ryan believed that his father was happy with one particular performance.

"I beat Adam Walters of Portage, and he took 2nd in the state that year," Ryan said. "That was my most memorable moment."

Ryan also thought the team traditions made for an enjoyable season.

"Before practice, Jake Rosenbaum and Anthony Hawkins and I would tackle Marcus Shrewsbury. He was so much bigger than all of us. He would just throw us off, and we'd all just gang up on him,"

He added that although practice was difficult, the team found time to bond.

"Before school we came in at six to do sprints, and after school, we practiced hard until about five," Ryan said. "After every Saturday meet, we would go to a different teammate's house to eat together."

jv & freshman teams create memories through wrestling practices, weekend tournaments

Described as unforgettable, the wrestling team said bus rides to and from regular season matches and weekend tournaments brought teammates closer together and produced many

"Tournament bus rides were some of my favorite memories during the season," freshman Ryan Gonzalez said.

Wrestling tournaments were held throughout Indiana on weekends and usually took place all day. Wrestlers arrived early the day of the South Bend tournament to catch the bus at 6 a.m. They spent the day sleeping to music, and most importantly wrestling.

"One of my favorite memories from the tournament was when I beat a kid from South Bend Riley. I was winning in the 3rd period, 19-17, and then I pinned him for the win," freshman Ben Cottrell said. Other highlights from the South Bend tournament included a first place finish by freshman Dallas Shrug and a second place finish by freshman Tommy Renn, both competing in the 119-pound weight class.

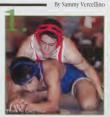

The Rensselaer tournament was another tournament that Ben and other wrestlers agreed was fun to attend

"The Rensselaer tourney was my favorite out of all of them because I pinned everyone and took 1st place," Ben said.

Along with weekend tournaments, wrestlers agreed that practices during the week combined hard work with enjoyment.

"Joke days on Thursdays were probably some of the funniest memories during the season," freshman John Hannon said.

Practices were held after school everyday in the wrestling room, while conditioning took place in the field house.

supporting teammates, building friendships, girls' swimming team creates buddy system

Waking up at 5 a.m., jumping into cold, frigid water and having Saturday practices until noon was nothing short of ordinary for the girls' swim team. While enduring what most might consider horrendous, these girls formed bonds of friendship.

Holding the school record for the 100-yard breastsroke with a time of 1:07, iunior Alyssa Kuras found out she couldn't swim throughout the season. During the preseason, Alyssa had surgery on her shoulders. Doctors cleaned out her cartilage in both shoulders, and tightened her tendons.

"The swim team was so supportive of me. They let me know they believed in me even though I couldn't swim," Alyssa said. "When I got discouraged, they cheered me up and soon my attitude changed."

Since her surgery, Alyssa became familiar with the junior varsity members and "helped them into the family." The upperclass girls stirred up some new traditions to bring together the team.

No leg shaving, the buddy system, Saturday morning breakfasts and red hair for conference were just a few of the traditions rousing in the pot. From preseason to right before sectionals, the team didn't shave their legs. race, we needed to find a way to bring the team together. The meet buddies did that. It created a system where everyone was supported and encouraged and no one was left out," junior Rachel Smith said.

In addition to the buddy system, every Saturday when the team practiced, they went out to breakfast at the Circle Café and then walked around the square.

"We really got to know each other outside of the team and going out to eat definitely brought all of us closer," freshman Angela Roberts said.

The unity of the girls didn't end there. Before sectionals, the entire team spent a practice making shirts for each other and decorating lockers.

"More intense, longer practices, and, of course, our new ways of connecting with the entire team made a more united team" junior Kara McIver said.

More to the point, each team member had contributed to the completeness of the team. Even some of the underclassmen had admired those who have been on the team for several years.

"Most of the upperclassmen were pretty amazing. I looked up to a lot of them because they went their fastest. They worked so hard that they had to be dragged out of the pool," freshman Lauren Stokoski said.

practice at dawn, practice after school, inspiration, dedication lead swimmers to success

By Shannon Compton

When the autumn leaves spiraled from their branches unto the ground, and the threat of a frigid winter surfaced, students began to settle into a seasonal routine different from the warmer, autumn months. The clocks fell back one hour, the oversized winter coats were taken out of storage, and the heaters were switched on.

When the crack of dawn rolled around, most students would still be nestled in their warm beds. There were some exceptions though. Twenty-six boys with different strengths and different motives behind joining the swimming or diving team awoke for morning practices when others would still be snoozing away, thoughts far from the pool.

Swimming success required two daily practices. "My routine consisted of getting up at 4 a.m., eating a little something, 5 a.m. practice, school, and more practice afterwards," senior Josh McCollom said.

During the practices, the athletes worked on their specific strengths. The swimmers practiced endurance, distance and speed, while the divers perfected their techniques.

Besides daily practices, the swimmers and divers needed inspiration to fuel their ambitions as "I probably wouldn't have trained as hard if I hadn't spent a year training with my brother, Chris," sophomore Brendan Morin said, "He was my inspiration on and off the team. I saw what intense training could do for you," he said.

"My teammates inspired me the most because they were always encouraging throughout the year," he said.

The practices the athletes endured and the inspiration they gained from various sources proved to aid them in their success as they met victory almost everywhere they competed, losing only two of their meets. After Sectionals, seven swimmers and divers were invited to compete at over half court. Kyle's only points came from free throws: however, Kyle did manage to set a school record by completing 17 assist. Zach Cecich (II) contributed with 16 points. "Zach probably ought to buy Kyle a steak dinner after the season," Coach Clint Swan said.

>> Three. In a 96-67 victory over Portage. Stephen Albrecht (11) scans the defense for an open teammate. Albrecht made six, three-point field goals in eight attempts. The team scored 61 points in the first-half alone, giving them their third straight win after losing the first four games.

>>Four. In a game against Lake Central, Zach Cecich (II) pulls down a rebound. Cecich served as the leading rebounder on the team and made first team all conference.

>>Five. Guarded in the corner by two LaPorte defenders, Billy Cox (11) drives towards the basket attempting to evade the double team. LaPorte won the game 64-58 and never lost the lead after going on a 12-2 run near the end of the third quarter. "My experience this season was a good one. We improved and exceeded our expectations," Billy said.

>>5ix. Dribbling around his defender, Ben Derks ((II) looks for an opportunity to score. Ben scored nine points, all of which were three-point field goals, in the 60-52 loss against Morton. The loss was the second in a four game long streak. "Even though we lost our first four games, our coach told us that we weren't going to change a thing." Ben said. "So, we bept our same style and started playing better together, and once we won our first game, we had confidence to keep winning."

boys' basketball team OVERCOMES odds, upsets number one team in the state

"I would definitely consider beating our rival, Valparaiso, as the highlight of our season," junior Zach Cecich said.

Not only did the team defeat nearby conference rival Valparaiso, but a the same time it also defeated the Times' number one ranked high school team in Indiana's class 4A by a score of 59-55.

"Beating Valparaiso was awesome. It's rare beating the number one team in the state," Zach said.

Junior Stephen Albrecht had his highest offensive statistics of the season. After scoring ten points in the first half, Stephen scored 21 points in the second half giving him a gamehigh of 31 points. He didn't miss from behind the three-point line making all six of his attemots.

"The vibe from the crowd against Valparaiso inspired us to play even harder," Stephen said. Afterwards, the crowd stormed the court to express their feelings after beating such a highranked opponent. "It was crazy. Everyone was crazy. Everybody celebrated by running onto the court after the game," senior Fabian Aries said.

This was the second year that the team experienced a newcomer coach, Clint Swan. Another new addition to the team was senior Matt Ernest. He did not begin the season with the team, but joined mid-season over Christmas break

"I came back to the team just because I missed playing basketball," Matt said.

Ironically, Matt's first game back came against Lake Central. Former Crown Point student and senior Dan Bouchee played for Lake Central. The team defeated the Indians 54-40 after losing to them earlier in the season.

In the sectionals, the team lost in overtime 65-60 to conference rival Chesterton. This was the third encounter throughout the season and the only game that Chesterton won of the three

"It was a tough way to go out because we knew we could have beat them," Zach said.

freshman, jv basketball

From running suicides to practicing free-throw shots, freshman and JV boy's basketball achieved many different aspects of practice, resulting in victory on the court.

"Practices are a lot different than they were at Taft [Middle School], but I believed through all our perseverance these practices have helped better us as a team," freshman Scott Donley said.

Running over two hours a day and learning plays from the varsity playbook, freshman players expanded their knowledge of what to do in certain game situations.

"We wanted to get them familiar with the offense that the varsity players would be running and have them learn some of those basic plays," freshman Coach Mike McMinn said.

Yet, JV practices were based on expanding their skills on speed and working with one another as a whole to meet the expectations for playing on the varsity level in the upcoming years. JV was more focused on the ways to help achieve and make varsity better. If they didn't hustle to a drill they were required to run suicides.

"Our practices were usually intense and involved a lot of fiveon-five shooting drills," sophomore Nick Thomas said.

While their practices were difficult, success was achieved with JV's two quality wins against their rival: Michigan City. Also, they won two out of three back-to-back double time games, which has never been accomplished.

This lifted their team moral which made their hard work worthwhile.

"I felt really comfortable playing with my team because I've been playing with them since sixth grade AAU," sophomore Nikola Pusara said.

With a record of 12-8, JV proved that with determination team success can be reached.

>>One. Standing at 6'7". Nathaniel Akers (10) focuses on getting another point for his team. "This season I really focused in the post to score points to help us win." Nathaniel said.

>> Two. Attempting to get around his East Chicago opponent. Mike Lipton (10) dribbles. "We knew if we won the East Chicago game, then we would compete with the best teams." Mike said. Winning with only three points, the team accomplished their goal.

>>Three. Running down the court. Scott Donley (9) attempts to successfully make it down the court. 'During the Merrillville game I was feeling a little tired because they kept trying to press us, but we made a comeback and almost won the game." Scott said. Scott scored a total of ten points.

>>Four. During the Kankakee Valley game. Zach Breuckman (9)shoots a free throw.. "I felt good because we were winning, and I had scored 15 points that game." Zach said.

>> Passing the ball to another player. Kyle Qualizza (10) focuses on the play. I made sure every time

I made sure every time I was on the court that I gave it my all. Also, I tried my best to hustle during every single play." Kyle said. One of Kyle's accomplishments was achieving a record of nine rebounds

>>One. During the East Chicago game, Nikola Pusara (10) tries to find an open team member to pass the ball to. "We were the underdogs in this game, and I honestly didn't think we had a chance, but we played well as a team and just made the plays we had to." Nikola said. Advancing through the plays, this marked the boys second double over time game in one week.

>>Three. In her warm up suit. Amanda Haisted (10), along with her teammates and trainers, size up the competition. "My favorite team to compete against was laborte. We are all very close to the gifts on the team, and many of us have become friends." Amanda said. "Even though we are ranked near each other, the competitions are fun, and I've lound myself cheering on the laborte gift as well as those on my own team." The team defeated laborte by 85 of a point.

>>Four. Warming up on the bars. Martina Buchholz (12) takes time to go through her routine before competing. Although the grist competed in a number of meets throughout the season, each grif had their favorites. "I loved sectionals because! lwars unnerup in the all-around." Martina said. Martina was the first CP gymnast to receive the Midferd Ball Mental Attrude Award. She was also named to the Indiana Cymnastics Academic All-start team.

pairing high goals with higher records, gymnasts achieve more than just recognition

Standing alone on the runway, all eyes in her direction, senior Martina Buchholz took a deep breath before sprinting down towards the vault. Martina had her own strategy for clearing her head.

"During the meets. I would take a moment and visualize what I was about to do before I competed in an event." Martina said.

At first glance, this kind of concentration might have seemed impossible. The constant rotation between vault, bars, beam, and floor events could have made any first time spectator confused, but after a closer look the meet's organization was easy to understand.

"Each school competed in different events at different times and our top gymnasts competed last," sophomore Amanda Halsted said. "Once the two teams were done with their event, they rotated until all four events had been completed."

Mastering these four different events often required the girls to work on their skills in the off-season as well as during the year.

"I spent my summer at a gymnastics camp in northern Wisconsin for two weeks," Martina said.

All of their hard work paid off in the post season as the gifls finished with a 7-2 record and continued their success by placing 3rd in sectionals and then advancing to regionals for the second time in the school's history.

"The team finished 3rd with a score of 109.925, the second highest in the school's history, breaking a record from 2005," head coach Ami Pysh said.

While attending the state finals meet, the team received an honor of a different kind. They wrapped up the awards ceremony with Martina winning the Mildred Ball Mental Attitude Award.

"It was a very prestigious award that carried a $1000 scholarship," Pysh said. "Only one athlete per sport was chosen at each of their state final competitions for the award, and Martina was the first Crown Point gymnast to ever receive this honor."

Finally, the season ended with Martina and Hillary Groff being named to the gymnastics Academic Allstate Team for the state of Indiana. They were two of the nine girls from the entire state to receive this recognition.

For Mike and the other guys on the team, "It felt amazing," junior Dave Corridan said. Playing in the Indiana Class 3A State Championship, the boys' hockey team overcame Fort Wayne Snider with a victory score of 5-3, earning them the first place title.

As a new coach took over the season and assisted the team to the state championship, they adjusted accordingly.

We learned how to settle our differences and play as a team," Mike said.

The bowling teams also adjusted as a teammate's parents decided to take over the coaching staff and lead them to the state

boys' and girls' bowling teams.

"Having their son on the team was like having another coach," senior Jeff Stephan said. "He was a helpful insight for the team.

The Rehul's had been coaching for a long time, and they knew more about bowling than anyone I knew," Megan said. "To be able to listen to their advice was a major step up.

Megan and her teammates took advantage of this new opportunity. After conquering the Lake Central Indians in sectionals and winning the title, the girls advanced to semi-state. However, their biggest challenge was to come. For the first time in history, the girls' bowling team made it to the state competition earning an 8th place.

With new coaches and new competitions, the the team attributed their success to an increased level of team chemistry.

"We all helped each other out and learned from each other's mistakes," Megan said, "We just had a better mind-set.

Sports were usually classified as a learning experience, but according to Coach Chuck Smoljan (Business), the players taught him more than he taught them about the sport of basketball.

"The players taught me so much. They taught me how to stay optimistic, and that whenever I had a bad day, it was not that bad compared to what they have to deal with daily," Smoljan said. "They were great people, and they seemed to have everything right."

Between the different seasons, the Special Olympics team made many positive changes.

"There were so many differences between the seasons. They had become more team-oriented and passed the ball around, and although they did not have a winning season, they learned more about the sport," Smoljan said.

small distances, great accomplishments varsity, junior varsity girls take to track

By Olivia Abbott

Taking fifth in the regionals and the DAC, and second in sectionals, the Girls' Track team ended the season with five girls competing at State.

During regionals, junior Leah Rashin qualified for state competition in two events, junior Meghan Kessler in two, and junior Stacy Qualizza, junior Jenn Bane, senior Kyla Renn, and freshman Sammy Vercellino qualified in one event. All six athletes who participated in the state meet in Bloomington metaled.

Not only were there State qualifiers and winners, but the girls broke school records individually and in relay events. In the 4x800 they ran a 9·46.91, in the 4x400 a 3:56.73 and in the 4x100 a 3:239. Junior Stacy Qualizza along with the 4x4 team broke school records.

"Breaking the school record was amazing," Stacy Qualizza said, "I never thought we could do something like that; it's going to be exciting to see who breaks it next."

The season's best also included senior Martina Bucholz for pole vaulting, junior Hayley Plummer for the 100-meter hurdles, senior Kyla Renn for 100-meter dash, and freshman Nicole Vega for the 3200 meter.

The team reported that making friends along the way was a definite boost. With a total of fifty-five girls all ranging in ages, there were many personalities to choose from.

"I enjoyed running with my friends, and I enjoyed coming to practice after school," sophomore Maggie Schuchow said. "The best part about being in track was being around my friends and competing in meets."

Who made all of this possible? The coaches, according to the team. Mark Croell, the head coach and the assistants: Patty Begley, Melissa Smith, Elizabeth Kinneer, and Ryan Turley led the team.

"Mr. Croell was an amazing motivator, and he uplifted the whole team. Ms. Kinneer taught us the specifics and made sure we have our stuff together, and Ms. Begley was always there to talk to, and she had so much experience as a runner and a coach," junior Leah Rashin said. -By Olivia Abbott Track and Field, a sport of individual accomplishments allowed teammates to access their own abilities separately while still being part of a team.

"What made track and field stand out was having individual events and competing against others for a personal best along with the team's best," freshman Zachary Konway said.

"No matter what, you knew (in track) you won or lost because of yourself and no one else," junior Jerry Hendrickson said. "You also developed a more open mind about other people's talents and abilities," he added.

While some students joined the team to improve their skills for another sport, others loved getting in shape and being part of a team.

>>Seven. Hurdle after hurdle. Mike Bishop (9) hurls himself faster and higher to beat his own time. "I rat track to get into shape for football," said Mike. "I ran the hurdles because it was a good experience." He pushed himself to run at 56.942 on the hundredmeter hurdles.

>> Eight. "Throwing discus helps me to relieve stress." said Cody Blue (II). "It also gave me a chance to meet new people." Putting his stress into it pays off as he gets a third, throwing 126'8".

Mike Bishop Cody Blue >>One. Swinging through her backhand. Chelsea Viers (9) concentrates on the ball. "I loved meeting new people and getting to know the coaches." Chelsea said. Chelsea ended with a winning record of 7-6

>>Two. Eleni Zervos (10) watches as her doubles partner Sarah Steffel (10) uses a backhand stoke to hit the ball. "I liked playing doubles because you had more confidence when you had someone with you all the time, and they brought up when you are not doing so hot." Eleni said. This was Eleni and Sarah's first year to play together.

>> Three. While playing varsity doubles, Sara Gniffis (12) watches as her partner. Beth Iddings (12) executes a volley. "Some of my favorite memories would be the conversations that I had with Shelly Kiefer and Sara Gniffis," Beth said. The team practiced Monday through Finday, for a total of ten hours per week.

between hits, misses oung tennis team brings home sectional title takes 2nd at regionals April said.

The girls' tennis team could be described as being a young team, but this notion did not discourage them, and with help from their head coach, Don Baron, they earned yet another sectional title.

"Even though we were expected to win sectionals, there were still some really intense matches. I still wanted to go out and support my team and watch some exciting competitive matches," freshman Needa Malik said.

Along with the memory of a sectional title, the girls' tennis season was filled with memorable matches. The LaPorte Slicers, who are characterized as being a rival of theirs, was a team that many girls hoped to beat. Victory was sweet for senior April Gosser when she defeated her LaPorte rival in her varsity singles match.

"My opponent and I have known each other for years and there's a huge rivalry between us. I ended up winning 6-0, 6-2, Another win against LaPorte came from Beth Iddings and Sarah Griffis.

"LaPorte had to be my favorite match because my partner, Sarah, and I beat their number one doubles team in an exciting match," Beth said.

Iunior Maria Radiceska felt her best match was against LaPorte, too.

"Although, I lost my match, I played my best and gave it my all. Also, I had my whole tennis team cheering me on at that match which was a big plus. So, LaPorte was my favorite match because I played with heart, guts, and a lot of intensity," Maria said.

Many players agreed that even though they lost as a team to the LaPorte Slicers, everyone played their finest tennis that match.

"LaPorte was my favorite match because that was the best our team had played," April

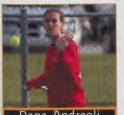

>>One. Becca Iddings (9) uses the forehand stroke to hit the ball across the net to the opposing team during her doubles match. "The Merrillville IV Invitational with the "love bus" and the down time with the team had to be some of my favorite memories this season." Becca said, Becca played IV doubles with her partner Hanna Tokoly, but received the chance to play in a one varsity doubles match during the season. Once matches started, the team spent about 10 to thirteen hours together per week seven varsity, seniors, spend four years together, earn winning season, send doubles team to state

By Devin Holme

For four memorable years, they worked together, shared in each victory and loss, and built up their ability and skill as a team.

"We had seven seniors on varsity, so we went through the whole four years working together. We were really excited about the season," senior Kyle Smith said.

Some were even further inspired simply by the fact it was their last year.

"Being my last year, I really wanted to do well. I knew I'd miss all of my good friends on the team, and I wanted to make this year count," senior Nick Maddalone said.

It wasn't just the final year for every member of the boys' varsity team, but for the beloved Coach Don Baron (Social Studies) as well. After five years of coaching boys' tennis, he made the decision to coach exclusively for the girls' tennis team.

"Mr. Baron was a great coach. He knew what he was doing, and I liked how he encouraged us to be competitive," Nick said. For two players especially, the hard work and encouragement paid off. Senior doubles partners Nick Maddalone and Alex Tsikouris won the doubles competition at regionals and advanced to the state competition. However, the doubles team lost in three matches to a team from Plymouth on October 14

"I got to play with my best friend, and we played really well together. We thought alike and our games really complemented each other." Alex said.

Overall, as the teammates finished their final season, they said they would miss playing the sport, as well the time spent together.

"Even though we didn't always meet our expectations, we worked hard, and I think we will be able to look back and be proud of what we accomplished together," Kyle said.

>>One. In a strategic move, Max Weiss (10) taps the ball a few short inches across the net. "I always tried to remain focused, and I was determined to keep up and win that point," Max said. Max played on the junior varsity team. Not only did he remain dedicated to tennis, but to school as well maintaining a 4.0 grade point average. In addition. Max demonstrated his commitment in the offseason by working with a tennis instructor at Match Point Tennis and Fitness facility in Griffith.

>>Two. Working together, Andrew Peretin (12) and acob Hoffman (12) play a doubles match. "Peretin and I remembered both our good and bad matches in order to keep us motivated," Jacob said. Andrew and lacob started off the season at the one doubles position. However, upon the arrival of Fabian Aries-Hidalgo (12) Andrew and Jacob were asked to play the number two doubles spot for the team.

>>Three, With a backhand return, Fabian Aries (12) places the ball in his opponent's court. "I played tennis as a child, and I just started playing again," Fabian said. "I had fun playing on the team because it also helped me to meet and become friends with more people." Visiting the United States for the first time. Fabian was a foreign exchange student from Ecuador. He lived with fellow teammate Alex Tsikouris (12).

>>Completing a backhand slice, Tom Tokofy (12) attempts to volley the ball back to his opponent. "It was disappointing to finish the way our team finished, but I still enjoyed my senior year on the team," Tom said. Tom played numer one singles. He was also a team co-captain ney ended their season 10-5.

junior varsity, varsity softball teams unite first time players, underclassmen play along side seniors

As the list went up on Mrs. Holtz's door, the girls knew there was nothing else they could do; the decisions had been made after three days of intense tryouts.

"The tryouts were intense and nerve wracking for me," freshman Katrina Kuiper said.

After the list was posted, Katrina and the other freshman assigned to the team could finally breathe.

"I was definitely so relieved and excited to just start the season," Katrina Kuiper said.

Freshman Katrina Klingberg made it through tryouts and earned a spot on varsity.

"The tryouts were really fun and kind of nerve wracking since I had to try out in front of a new coach, but I kept my thoughts positive," Katrina Klingberg said.

Thirteen freshman, including both Katrina's, made the girls' softball team for their first experience on the field as high school softball players. Along side the freshman, were nine sophomores, five juniors, and three seniors.

"We all got really close and had such a passion for softball,"

>>One. On second base. Amber Pierce (11) steps down and proceeds to make her way to home plate. "Coach always told us to get a good jump and we would always be safe." Amber said. >>Two. Pitching against Morgan Township, Taylor Perry (10) strikes out her opponent for the second time. "I just looked forward to improving my pitching skilds a each game." Taylor said.

>>Three. Down the field, Kelsey Rather (10), Amy Fairchild (11), Anna Stephens (12), and Alison Adank (11) followed by ten other members of varsity, congratulate the opposing team. "Winning wasn't everything, attitude was." Amy said.

>>Four. At bat, Anna Stephens (12) positions herself at home plate. "When I was at bat I tried to relax and play the game one pitch at a time," Anna said.

sophomore Kaitlyn Hultz said.

First time players did not linger only among freshmen. Senior Andjalina Obradovic, also known as Lina, made this season her first attempt for a team position. Lina had not participated on a softball team since the summer before her freshman year.

By Nicole Chromey

"I was definitely nervous because I had not picked up a bat or glove in over three years," Lina said.

Lina played since she was four years old but came to a decision to put her love for the game on hold.

"I was going through a lot, and I just wanted to start concentrating on one sport, so I chose basketball instead," Lina said.

After three years of no activity on the field, Lina began to realize why she should seize the opportunity and try out for the team her last year.

"I missed playing the game," Lina said, "so I decided, why not go out for the team, I really had nothing to lose."

Lina ended her last year as a first-year varsity player.

>>Positioned in right field, Amiee Favia (11) catches the ball coming towards her. "I got a lot of action out there." Amiee said. "It was very fast paced." I have been playing softball since I was four years old," she said.

>>One. While a teammate hits the ball into the outfield. Heather Robison (12) slides into third base. "The best part of the game was getting back -to-back triples," Heather said. Triples were when one play consisted of three outs.

>>Two In her shortstop position, Bianca Ramirez (9) completes her throw to first base. "Shortstop was a really fun position because that was where most of the action happened." Bianca said." Jumping and diving for the ball was the best."

>>Three. Going into splits to beat the runner. Lindsay Gernenz (11) receives a ball from the third baseman. "Splits hurt pretty bad, but it felt so good to know you caught the ball for the team" Lindsey said.

wins 15 straight, captures sectional, regional title, achieves 1st place state ranking

Devin Holn

"I think it was pretty awesome that we did so well," senior Adam Kukulski said.

The boys managed to drive through the season with a mere two losses. In the end, the team was ranked number one in the state in the class 4A division.

"Being a senior, I think this was the best way I could have asked to go out. All season we put in a lot of time and practice, and it was nice to see our efforts pay off so much," Adam said.

Throughout the season, the boys spent many hours practicing and developed just as many pre-game rituals in hopes of keeping their winning streak alive.

"It was difficult to stay focused for all seven innings; I listened to the same song before every game to get myself into the right mind-set. I also tried to keep myself calm during the game, and listen to what Coach wanted us to do." junior Nick Hladek said. "Mostly, though, I just tried to go out there, keep things fun, and hopefully win, he added. While the team eventually did encounter a loss, they agree that they tried not to let it bother them.

"It was a real let-down when we lost against Chesterton, but it was also unbelievable that we started our season with 15 straight wins," junior Russell Chiek said

"Either way, it was important that we kept the right attitudes and didn't let ourselves get too upset over it," he added.

After the May 4th loss against Chesterton, the team resumed their winning streak, only to lose once more, on May 11th to Boone Grove. However, their efforts paid off as they went on to win against Valparaiso, Portage, and Chesterton to win the sectional championship. Their perseverance continued to yield success as they won the regional championship in five ninnings against Lake Central on June 5th.

The season came to a close only when Penn overcame the team at the semi-state in a devastating 9-2 loss.

Experience is usually not a word that would be associated with freshman or JV sports, but surprisingly both the JV and freshman teams had several years of experience.

"I have been playing baseball for about five years prior to this season," freshman Kevin Demeuse said.

Having some experience to build on helped to lead both teams to a great record. The winning record wasn't the only important aspect about the season. Gaining skills that would go beyond baseball, as well as, beyond high school was also important.

"I will take away confidence and leadership from baseball," junior Kyle Bacon said. "They are two things that are needed for both baseball and real life."

Many of the players had a certain influence that led them to start playing in the first place.

"My dad played for the Chicago White Sox when he was younger, so it inspired me to play," said junior Jordan Lindeman.

With all the seriousness that the game brings, the freshman team found time to be successful as well as have fun.

"I will always remember the time we were forced to perform Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet in front of the girls' track team for practice," freshman Brad Pusateri said.

The fun helped break the monotony but was reserved only for the right time. According to the players, practices were very rigorous and involved batting practice, ball handling skills and weight lifting.

"For conditioning we practiced inside; we did five laps, and then cardio on the treadmills," said Mike Hernandez. "Outside we would usually just run foul poles."

Many of the athletes went beyond the practice field. "I ran around my neighborhood every other night, and I practiced my sprints in my driveway," Kyle said.

>>One. Sprinting at full speed, Kyle Bacon (11) tries to beat the ball to home plate. He had a total of I 4 RBIs for the season as well as 1 of the 4 home runs. Kyle played center field. "I didn't really choose to play that position. When I got to high school the coach moved me to the outfield, and I have grown to like rt." Kyle said.

>>Two. Determined to get the out, third baseman Mike Hernandez (III) fields the ball and throws to first base for the out. He had 0 errors on the season. "The best moment I had was the first game when I stepped on the mound for the first time." Mike said.

>>Three. Wating anxously, some of the JV team watch from the dugout in the final minutes of the game. The JV team out scored opponents 12 to 8.
>>Four. During the Lowell game. Jeff Limbough (9) leads off first base successfully stealing 2 for the season. "Being put in the big pressure situations will be the best experience for me later in life." Jeff said.

>>Rounding third base Brad Pusater (9) scores a point. "I play right field as well as designated hitter beause lifet that it was the best chance for me to get playing time." Brad said. He said he also gained more than just playing time from the sport. "Playing baseball allowed me to learn about disopine Brad said.

>>One. With his eye on the ball. Scott Donley (9) gets ready to swing. Scott was at bat 50 times. As one of the key players, Scott had to learn to keep his cool while under pressure. "Basball has taught me not to get angry too quickly because I get a temper sometimes." Scott said Playing second base and also pitching. Scott enjoyed being in the infield where he was most valuable. >>Two. Trying to take out a Lake Central player, Joe Baker (11) awaits a pass from his teammates. Making big plays is a huge responsibility for the first baseman. He also was a pitcher "

"Dancing at basketball games was better because the floor allowed us to perform skills that were impossible to do on the football field." Natalie said.

working through long practices, dance team takes first in state, achieves national ranking

"During Nationals, you don't think," junior Jerianna Rhye said.

"There are about 15,000 people watching you, ESPN cameras everywhere. It's a rush." For the fifth year in a row, the varsity dancers were invited to compete at Nationals after winning the title of the number one dance team in Indiana. At the competition, the girls placed 12th place in kicks and 7th in their poms routine.

During competition season, we practiced four to six days a week for four hours each day," senior Courtney Baird said.

Sometimes, the repetition of dance practices caused stress for the girls.

The hardest part about practices was drilling the routines over and over again to reach near perfection," senior Natalie

'As a senior, it was bitter knowing that I wouldn't see my best friends, but at the same time it was sweet knowing that a lot of the stress in my life was over," she added.

"Between dance and studying, I tended to forget that I had friends," sophomore Mandy Rattazzi said.

The regular dance season began in the fall, four months after the girls began practicing in May for the upcoming season. It continued into the winter months when the games where moved off of the football field and onto the basketball courts.

"It was easier to perform at basketball games because you're not so far away from the crowds, but football games were more fun," sophomore Bethany Komasinski said.

From practicing the same routine for up to four hours a day to standing in front of thousands spectators at a national competition, the dedication an athlete feels towards her sport was evident in the junior varsity and varsity dance teams.

"Dancing took a lot of blood and sweat, and still I wouldn't miss a single second of it for all the world," freshman Erin Hanley

>>Smiling for the opponent's crowd, Nikkole Stagowski (10) with teammate Alexis Favia (10) performs with the JV team during half-time on the basketball court. "What I liked most about dancing was the passion and the way I felt when I was performing, especially at competitions. I loved how you could show your emotions through your dancing. Many people thought that dancing was easy, but I felt that it wasn't," Nikkole said. When Nikkole wasn't practicing twice a week for three hours, she danced in a studio outside of school.

"It takes a lot of stretching and conditioning to perform the kick routine well We won our fifth state title performing this routine," Simone said

>>One. With both the mental and physical support of her tearmates. Stacy Marin (12) performs for the crowd at a gurls' varsity basketball game. Stacy was one of the main flyers for both basketball and football season. "Ben Allien was my partner, and we stunted together all year. We had an awesome time and stunting with him was probably my favorite part of the season." said Stacy. >>Two. Cheering on a touchdown. Ethan Brettweiser (10) lifts up his megaphone in triumph. Finally hing two boys on the cheerleading team allowed for the renneamation of the big red CP flag, which hadn't made tas debut since the 2003 season. "My fined and I decided to try out for the team just for fun, but he chickened out and I pussed it." Ethan said.

>>Thee. Celebrating a first-down during a chilly friday inght football game. Kloe Belush (10) helps to bring up the crowds excitement. The cheeleaders performed at every football game no matter rain, snow, or shine. Overcoming these adversities and others helped the girls become close. "One time we were on our way to Six Flags for a competition, and after the two hour drive, we found out it had been canceled," Kloe said. "We ended up stopping at a mall that was on the way and shopped the rest of the day."

>>Four. Escotting his momento the football field. Ben Allen (12) celebrates senior night. They took advantage of a break in the action at halfilme on a Friday night in order to celebrate the gaduating bunch. "I originally got into cheerleading because my step-brother was on the team." Ben said. "I also wanted the chance to try something new and completely different."

from base to flyer, cheerleaders use positive attitudes to soar towards victory

By Meghan Frost

When the buzzer sounds to signal the end of the first quarter and the players jog off to join their huddles, many would expect lines at the concession stand to begin winding around the lobby. Instead of taking this momentary break in the game to grab some refreshments, many fams stuck around to watch the cheerleading team take the floor.

The girls had always been able to perform a variety of stunting tricks at football and basketball games, but the addition of a new boy to the squad helped their performances reach a new level. according to the squad.

"Having two boys on the team had allowed us to start doing partner stunting," sophomore Kaitlin Cannon said.

A new male presence on the team helped the overall chemistry as well.

"Both the guys were very strong and had helped us to keep positive attitudes," senior Meredith Luedtke said.

New options in performing allowed the team to compete in variety of competitions. In addition to the local Jr. Bulldog camp and banquer, they competed at the Dance Team Showcase, Six Flags competition, LaPorte competition, the regionals, national qualifiers, nationals, and state. After attending many competitions, the chereladers developed a number of traditions that they said helped them achieve success.

"We always wore different colored lollies to the Six Flags competition," Kaitlin said.

Mastering the stunts and tumbling tricks needed to do well in competitions required many of the girls to spend their time during the off season working on their skills.

"I went to open gym at Gymnastics Plus at least once a week to work on my tumbling," senior Kaite Duncan said. "We went to nationals, so the whole team was strongly encouraged to be able to at least do a back filp." Some others joined different sports in order to keep their skills sharp. Both school sponsored gymnastics and club teams were popular options for the girls.

"I was on the gymnastics team to help with my tumbling," freshman Amanda Nisle said.

>>Executing a liberty during a halfitime routine. Sam Kats (10) demonstrates a stunt for the crowd. The liberty was one of the many technical stunts the cheerleaders performed for the crowd during football and baskeball games. The team also showed off their stunting at a variety of competitions around the area where they often relied on superstitions as well as talent. "Natalie Entilis wore these socks to every competition and football game for good luck." Sam said. "The only time she fogot to war the lucky socks we lost to larbore in the regionals."

>>One. With the game on the line, Jaime Teske (9) helps to raise the spirits of the crowd during a brief time-out. Cheering at basketball and football games want the only way the team brought school spirit to fans. They brought red and white from the court and the field to the fallways. "We made all the banners for the football players to run through during football season and we also put the welcome back signs on all their lockers for the first day of school: said Jaime. "We also made signs to hang around the school for team support."

Student Council- What looked great on a college application? According to Student Council members, years of dedicated service to the student body.

Student Council, lead by President Michelle Kiefer, served at a student leadership organization. In addition, the group also raised money for charitable organizations, including Riley Children's Hospital.

"We all helped the school and community become a better place," senior Alex Tsikouris said.

"I have had a lot of fun; it was a great feeling helping out my school," junior Sary Tokoly said.

National Honor Society- National Honor Society

also brought recognition from college recruiters. The organization honored students who maintained a certain academic standard along with a good attitude.

"NHS looks great for your college application," senior Cori Mellen said.

The group also participated in charitable endeavors since senior members were required to complete at least 20 hours of community service.

"It was just fun hanging out while helping out the community. Our advisor (Bernard Kowalski) really committed himself to helping us achieve," Cori said.

Robot, Tech, Art Clubs

Creating and designing go to new heights

Robotic Club- Trying to get students involved, the newly created Robotic Club modeled, created, and drew up a distinctive robot to execute a designated task.

"The enthusiasm and dedication by the students to be involved was what sold me, not the actual robot performance itself," sponsor Mr. Mark Querry (CAD) said.

This club was about more than just building a robot; it helped bring students together to work as a team to accomplish certain tasks in individual areas.

"As an animator of the team, I was in charge of creating an animation promoting the environment and the robot," senior Matt Pogozelski said.

Tech Club- Students with technological interests also took a new position with their involvement in programming the robot to move on its own without any student intervention. They were divided into three separate areas: programming, flash animation, and Lego design. They were also in charge of designing and creating a web site for the robotics team.

"Being head of the flash team, we created many neat animations for web sites and making computer games produced a really fun time," junior Justin Leoni said.

Not only did Tech Club work with the robotics team, but they also worked to maintain other school organizations' web sites in the building.

Art Club- The Art Club also tried some new ideas as well. Their homemade Valentine cards were a major hit along with their Homecoming float.

"We entered a really neat float that resembled Van Gogh's painting, Starry Night. It was a big hit," Art Club sponsor Mrs. Dorothy Duffala said.

Whether it was building and controlling a robot, designing games and web sites, or even creating Valentine's cards, each organization provided an artistic or technological outlet for their club members. -By Danny Krause

Fall Play

Actors, crew keep lights on, 'Noises Off'

The process of putting on a play involved these ingredients: lines, actors and an audience. However, if people were behind the scenes, they shouldn't have been surprised if they inhaled whiffs of hairspray, heard the frantic yells of stage managers or a drill being heard due to the lack of swinging from a door.

Then it stopped. Instead of yells, there were whispers; the aerosol hairspray cans were put away for the next night and the door stopped swinging. The reason? It was opening night.

"Opening night went very well!" senior hair, make-up and ostume crew member Kristy Bielak said. "The play was so physical that it was hard to know what to expect."

Noises Off, a tale of love, suspense and hijinks was a play within a play; each actor had to perfectly time when and where they were going to enter and exit the stage area with their lines ready to be executed.

"What was different about the play was that it was extremely dependent on lines and entrances, so the audience saw the rehearsal backstage and the 'bloopers' of the final performance,' senior Bobbie Ferrell-Brey who played the director's assistant Poppy in the production said.

On opposite nights, though, junior Kara Ingelhart played Poppy in place of Bobbie.

"Noises Off! was a good play because it showed the audience how much work we put into a production," Kara said. "We still maintained a humorous attitude with its exaggerated story line."

Not only did the actors have to have great timing to pull off this particular type of play, but the stage and lighting crew had to be perfect as well.

"It did take a lot of time and effort, but I felt that by being on the stage crew will help me in the future," senior lighting supervisor Nathan Mueller said.

Marching Band and Color Guard (Royal Regiment)

Performers entertain half-time crowds

Marching Band- Spending time preparing for competitions for the first time in a few years, the Royal Regiment, performed "The Shadows of Dragons at Mount Prospect, Indiana. Although they did not win, they learned from the endeavor.

"It was most definitely a fun experience," junior Craig Hebda said.

The group also performed on a hot summer day in at the Fourth of July parade.

"Marching in the parade was my favorite memory, because many people cheered for us, and it got the community involved," Carrie said.

Each student has his own reasons for joining the band.

"I always wanted to do it (marching band). I also wanted to play drums and when I finally got a chance to, I was overwhelmed," freshman Carrie Ohlenkamp said.

Color Guard- Students involved in the color guard section of Royal Regiment also had their own reasons for joining.

"I first joined Color Guard because I always loved watching the team twirl the flags, and I wanted to try it for myself," junior Jacob Brumfield said.

The team members said they loved to please the halftime crowd.

"The best memory was after our third show; that was the best show we ever had. I remember staring out into the crowd and having them cheer for us at the end," Jacob added. -by Olivia Abbott

Pep, Jazz, Advanced & Intermediate Bands

Comfort, commitment brings success to bands

To the members of the band, the keys to success were simple. Structure, comfort, focus, and experience were all ways to open doors to new possibilities on the road to accomplishment.

"The start of the year was a little rough, but we improved a lot as the year went on," sophomore Tom Lagendorf said.

For everyone in band, being relaxed was not a problem.

"We're all more comfortable with each other and have a lot of fun, but we still knew how and when to be serious," senior Angie Budgin said.

Because the members of band were a tightly-knit group, they said it was easy to have a good time while constantly making improvements on their performances.

"While we were in Terra Haute for the ISU Jazz Fest, we had an eating contest at the Golden Corral," junior Brad Stagowski

High school jazz bands from all over the state met in Terra Haute to play in front of each other and to be critiqued.

Any positive criticism was taken into account for future performances.

"Playing the baritone for a long time helped me relax during competitions because I knew that I had plenty of experience behind me," junior Matt Kositzky said.

Experience was something possessed by the entire band due to the fact that everyone had been playing their instruments for years. The continuity of playing a specific instrument from junior high to high school influenced how the band played.

"I had been playing the saxophone since I was eleven years old," junior Anthony Bishop said.

During competitions and even practices the band could tell that their hard work throughout their musical careers was paying off.

"When we performed well, it really gave me a feeling of satisfaction," Matt said. -By Adam Merkel

Orchestra

Orchestra wins 150 medals at ISSMA

From sight reading music to performing in front of hundreds of people, orchestra members achieved many accomplishments as a whole and as individuals.

"Our theme was "Gold" due to all of our gold rankings and medals we won from contests," Orchestra Director Mr. James Deal said.

All together, the orchestra achieved 150 gold medals in the ISSMA solo and ensemble contest. Intermediate orchestra was split into two ensembles among the class at ISSMA, where both ensembles ranked in the gold medal catagory.

"After the contest, I had this feeling of self achievement and relief. All of the determination and effort we put in came together. It was an incredible feeling," freshman intermediate member Xia Meng Howey said.

Chamber orchestra, an extracurricular activity, gained success by ranking gold at state with a record breaking 36 participants who both qualified for state and earned first band competition for the very first time.

"My favorite memory from orchestra was ISSMA. Getting five golds was a great accomplishment. It made me feel good to be able to get medals and not play in any sports," freshman chamber member Carrie Ohlenkamp said.

Advanced orchestra performed their annual elementary concert where fourth grade students came to enjoy the sounds and sights of advanced orchestra. Members of orchestra dressed up in costumes that related to the songs they played. Some exhibited pirate garb or cartoon character costumes.

"I loved all the 'yeahs' and 'woos' from the elementary students as Mr. Deal announced that the next piece will be Pirates of the Caribbean or Spongebob," junior Amanda Harrison said.

With all of the medals the members earned, the Orchestra became one of the most recognized in the state.

Spring Musical

76 trombones sound song of success

As the lights dimmed down in the theater and the audience took their seats, the cast stood backstage awaiting their debut.

"Before going on stage for my first entrance of the night, I was always a little nervous," senior Corey Hill said. "But once the show was on its way, everything ran smoothly for me."

The crew agreed that the show ran smoothly for everyone. With its smooth-talking salesman, peppy pickalittle ladies, and brilliant barbershop quartet, the Music Man kept its audience laughing from the curtain call to the final act.

The usual stress of rehearsals, lines, and dance numbers were not the only obstacles that the cast was challenged to overcome in order to put on a successful show.

"We had quite a few elementary aged kids performing with us, so our rehearsals had to be extra-structured," senior Kyle Smith said.

"With children involved, patience was definitely needed by all," senior Caroline Diamond said.

The cast also memorized a number of fast-paced songs and physically-challenging dance numbers.

"I played Harold Hill, a character who was unique from all others because he had to be and extremely fast talker," senior CJ Pawlikowski said. "I had to learn hundreds of words and speak in tempo. It presented me with a bit of trouble."

Just as much action was happening under and behind the stage as was happening on it as the pit and crew worked to make sure the show went off flawlessly.

"Playing in the pit was a lot harder than I thought it would be," sophomore Mandy Rattazzi, a first time member, said. "It was awesome to see how the music fit in with the show."

Members of the pit had to practice just as much in order to make sure they played their best on opening night.

"The music is always a challenge, but we got through it," senior Mallory Julian said. "We panicked at first, but in thee end, and we all had a blast." -By Meghan Frost

Freshmen, Mixed, Treble & Concert Choirs

Students sing to celebrate seasons

If you were ever in the music department during any part of the year, you heard a symphony of voices singing the sounds of the season.

During the winter, the four choirs sang religious music dealing with the various holidays celebrated in December, along with traditional tunes that an audience could recognize and sing along with.

The spring season was accompanied by a relaxed selection of songs that allowed members of the four various choirs to dance and let loose before the school year was over.

"My favorite concert was Spring Sing because of the fun, upbeat songs we got to sing and the chance to express our musical tastes," sophomore Chrissy Kvachkoff said.

There were some changes made within the choral department in order to cater to the needs of over 300 students taking choir. Mrs. Sandi Tiemens from Kankakee Valley High School became the choral director's assistant while Mrs. Cynthia Bradford, from Taft, became the director of the Freshmen Girls' Choir.

"The best thing about having the job was that I taught some girls I had known for three years since they were in seventh grade at Taft Middle School," Mrs. Bradford said.

Students took choir to express themselves in an artistic environment, to reconnect with former teachers and to sing songs that reminiscent of the seasons.

>>One. (12/20) Keenly watching Mrs. Joanne Borodine, sopranos and basses of the Concert Choir are reminded to sing softly and quietly during the Winter Concert. The Concert Choir consisted of mostly seniors. "I am definitely going to miss choir when I graduate." Heather Kala (12) said. "I've been singing since I could remember and have had a lot of (in at all the concerts. My ultimate flavorite was the Spring Sing Concert because we danced and had fun."

>>Two. (4/19) Sight-singing, Kassi Lamaich (10) and Thomas Vanderplough (9) practice reading music before learning a new song. "Sight-reading is important because it enhances your ability to sing and read music." said Thomas. Choir class time consisted of warming-up, practicing pitch and tone through sight-singing, and learning new music for the various concerts and contest.

>>Three. (4/16) Chatting in between songs, Mike Luss (9), Nick Polisson (9) and Trevor St. Aubin (10) discuss the choreography for the Spring Sing concett held in May. "The part I enjoyed most about choir was spending the day with Mis. Borodine," Trevor said. "Also, the people were cool and the girls loved a boy who could sing."

>>Four. (12/20) Performing for the second time that night, members of the Concert Choir sing Lux Aurumque. or Uight of Gold. for the Holday concert. Whenever I sing in front of an audience. I have an incredible rush of adrenaline overcome my body, said Kate Titus (12). *Il liked choir too much not to take it my senior year.

>>Five. (2/22) Warming up before their winter choir conert in February, members of the Freble Choir, juniors Amy Beusse, Briana Frasure, Stacey Qualizza, Katy Oresko, and Amanda Lukswist (sested), pactace their song selection. "My favorite parts about choir were the concents and the satisfaction you felt after performing songs you worked on for months," Katy said. "I loved the finends you made and the music you sang, It was an incredible experience and a rewarding one for anyone who loves to sing."

>>Six. (12/12) Demonstrating the tempo of a holiday song, Mrs. Joanne Borodine conducts the Treble Choir during class. "It was always a delight to see Mrs. Borodine everyday." Sarah Board (12) said. "It was a mandatory part of my daily schedule, along with singing, I love how much I improved through the years with Mrs. Borodine."

>>Seven. (12/20) Accompanying the Freshman Girls' Choir during the Holiday concert on the piano. Mrs. Sandi Tiemens concentrates on her music. "We were a really close-kint family, and everything was so sureral." Of Palikowski (12) said. This Spring Sing was the last time all eight CyP members sang together. "My favorite moment at this Spring is gas ws when Chris Johnson (12) called all of us up on stage." Adam said.

">"Two. (5/16) Dancing to "Everybody Loves My Baby."
Kristin Batz (II) holds her hat at her side during the choreography." I think this song was every one's favorite."
Kristin said. "The dance was just really exciting, and there was never a dull moment in the song or in the choreography."
she added. Kristin helped choreograph dances several times for both choir and show choir.

>>Three. (5/16) As Brooke Bonich (11) performs on stage, she completes a turn around that twirfs her hair. "For the most part, I really enjoyed all of the songs that we sang," Brooke said. "My favorite memories were just performing and having so much fun with my finends," she added, "Spring sing was an exceptionally good time."

>>Four. (11/4) While waiting to go on stage. Shelly Armsbrong (11), Nicci Brown (11), Lynn Stanko (11), and Kara Ingelhart (11) rehease their dance moves. "I joined show choir because I loved to sing, and I wanted to meet new firends." Shelly said. "My favorite memory was dancing with the Mixed Show Choir in Night Fever," Kara said. On the other hand, Nicci Brown's Favorite time during the musical season was, "performing with QVP at Pheasant Valley." Nicci said.

>>Five. (9/28) Snappir' his fingers. Ben Allen (12) coordinates himself with the beat of the song. "The Mansions of Lord' was my favorite song because I got to sing really high notes," Ben said. The musical group QVP enjoyed singing on the bus on their way to performances. "We sang on the bus and just messed around," Ben said. "They were the most fun part of the year."

>>Six. (12/20) Singing a Christmas medley, Chekea Bowman (10) captures the audience during the Christmas program. "I loved to sing and dance; my favorite memory was when Ms. (Narcy) Bothek (choir choreographed) choreographed undene." Chekea and Helping to spread the Christmas joy, the girl's performed at a Christmas haquet for the Timothy Ball Elementary school teachers.

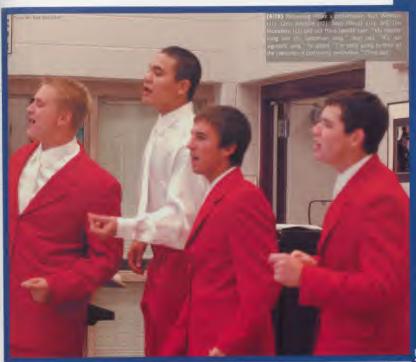

Girls' show choir, & QYP

Choirs execute challenging moves, music

Show Choir Most girls joined show choir because they loved to sing and dance.

"I heard it was a lot of fun, and I was always interested in it," junior Kristin Batz said.

The girls performed at choir concerts, Pheasant Valley Country Club, and the Lake County Juvenile Center. The dances were choreographed by Nancy Bochek, Jen Hagerbomb and Kristin Batz. More than 10 of the girls agreed that spring sing was the best concert of the year.

"The songs and dances were always really fun and upbeat," junior Jessica Teske said.

"My favorite song was "Everybody Loves My Baby," senior Ana Radiceska said. "It was really challenging," she added.

QYP- Like show choir, QYP performed at each concert, country clubs and the Lake County Juvenile Center. However, they also appeared at the teachers' convention in Indianapolis, and the Raddison Hotel in Merrillville. The boys usually practiced every Wednesday under the direction of Mrs. Joanne Haley-Borodine, and sometimes with the help of senior Kyle

"One of my favorite memories was singing to senior Jake Kabella on his front porch one night," senior Kyle Smith

"We then proceeded to sing on the street; it was a lot of fun" he added.

"I joined QYP because it was such an aspiration of mine," senior CI Pawlikowski said.

"I'm really going to miss it," he added.

Boys' & Girls' State, Rotary & Kiwanians

Seniors rewarded with scholarship, opportunity

Rotarians/ Kiwanians On May 12th, seniors Beth Iddings and Joe Lukawski were awarded with $1000 scholarships from the Crown Point Rotary Club.

"It was a pleasant surprise," Joe said, "The cost of college seemed immeasurable at times, and each little bit of scholarship money made things a little easier."

The Rotary Club, a group of business and professional leaders, encourages high ethical standards for high school students. Every Wednesday, Rotarians from the high school dined and discussed issues within their surrounding area with members of the community at Youche Country Club.

"I met and discussed issues with former mayors of Crown Point and also alumni of Purdue University," senior Paige Rothrock said. Boys' and Girls' State Another honors event, boys' and girls' state occurred in the summer with the seniors for the upcoming year. The students nominated for this event took part in different activities related to the Indiana government system. Seniors Kyle Smith and Thomas Tokoly were nominated to attend. The two students participated in lessons relating to the Indiana government system daily.

"If you were a delegate, you attended a caucus to nominate people from your assigned political party for state level positions," senior Kyle Smith said.

These activities lasted for four days starting June 10th. "Ours lasted for hours and had to be postponed until the morning," he added. -By Nicole Chromey

MSA and FCA

Religious clubs bring students together

MSA- "I thought it would be a good outlet for the growing number of Muslim kids at our school," founder senior Maryam Khalid said concerning the creation of the new Muslim Student Association.

"The MSA really had the opportunity to change the face of Islam that the media has given it," Maryam said.

The club sponsored a "fast-a-thon," in which they asked their fellow students and teachers to fast for a day and held a dinner after sundown.

"It was a way to increase awareness of Muslim customs and traditions, so that they community would better understand our faith," junior Abdullah Malik said.

"It was really nice to be part of a brand new chapter," junior Asad Ahmed said.

"We also participated in an interfaith volunteer day to help out with Habit for Humanity," junior Sarah Shabaan

"The main goal of the MSA is to spread awareness because most people don't know what Islam is really about," Sarah said.

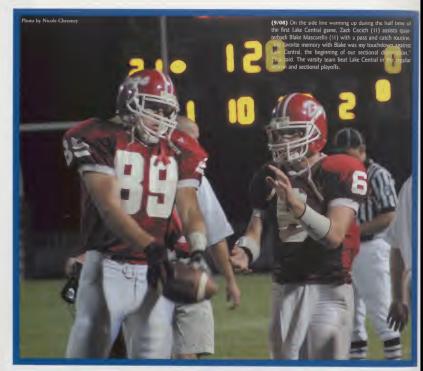

FCA. It was early morning and the sun was still hiding behind the school. Kids were gathered around the flag pole, interlocking hands, eyes closed, praying for anything and everything. See You at the Pole served as the Fellowship of Christian Athlete's yearly function. Students joined around the flagpole before school to pray together for peace and the school.

"In the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, we apply the Word of God to our lives," junior Ciara Artis said. At See You at the Pole, the prayers were not 'religious' or 'traditional,' but came from the overflow of the student's changed hearts. Everyone is invited to See You At The Pole, not just devout Christians."

The club met weekly in the black box of the auditorium.

"Every Thursday, before school, we came together and shared a message, which is like a mini-sermon that applies to everyday life," said senior Lindsey Pals.

GVC and Lettermen Club

Childhood determination pays off

Becoming a member of the Girls' Varsity Club can happen at any grade level of high school as long as the girl earns a letter for her participation in a sport. For Ashley Gose, she entered the Girls' Varsity Club as a freshman varsity swimmer.

"I lettered for swimming because I was a state qualifier," Ashley said.

Along with the accomplishments of state qualification, Ashley also made Academic All American. However, according to Ashley, her biggest accomplishment was, "winning the 500 freestyle in the Duneland Athletic Conference," she said.

Ashley's main motivation was her passion for success at a younger age.

"It meant a lot to me to be a varsity club member. I had worked ever since I was six to letter in swimming," she added. Ashley's goals were achieved her first high school swimming season, setting the bar for her further ambitions as a swimmer.

With the help of Ashley, the girls' varsity swim team sent nine girls to the state meet in ten events.

State competitions were not the only exciting events, the boys varsity basketball team had members of the letterman's club beat the number one ranked team in the state, Valparaiso.

>Two. (10/05) Grabbing the hand of fellow teammate Tori Welker (10). Stacy Qualizza (11) demonstrates her support for her team and shows her sportsmanship qualities. "The most important thing to me was to try and be a good role model and leader for the other guls on the team." Stacy said.

>>Three. (3 /13) Varsity basketball player, Steve Albrecht (11) accepts an award from Coach Clint Swan. "As a varsity member, I wanted to represent our school positively." Steve said. This award was issued to him at the Winter Sportsmanship Banquet in March.

>>Four. (12/13) Pinning a member of the Merrillville wrestling team. Andrew Szymborski (11) fights to stay on top of his opponent. "It was a good feeling to compete with the best athletes around." Andrew said. "Standing on the podium at state when I took 5th place made me feel great."

>>Five. (3/02) One morning at Jerry Ross Elementary school. Tommy Parks (12), Joe Patrick (12), Chris Johnson (12), and Dan Byrd (12), of the vaisity football team, read books to the younger children. "It was very rewarding to see the kids light up as I walked in the room. I felt like a super hero." Dan said. Tommy gave them advice for their upcoming years." I told them success is achieved through discipline, hard work, and sacrifice."

>>Six. (2/20) Approaching the vault, Jacquelin Cannon attempts to complete her vault routine. "Beng a freshman on varsity. I was able to really show what I could do," Jacquelin said. "I was able to compete at all varsity meets with high level gymnasts."

>>Seven. (9/20) Down the field. James Steriovski (10) challenges his opponents with a tricky foot maneuver. "One time I slid through an opponent's legs, then kicked the ball over two other opponent's head's and then scissor kicked the ball through the goalie's hands into the left upperninety (top left corner)." James said. "It also happened to be the winning goal and it made the opening video clips on Showtime."

>>One Mimicking the dance team. Dito Sanchez (10) helps keep the crowd pumped up during the basketball halfitme. The Dog Crew allowed students to express their sprint in an appropriate way. "I wanted a chance to promote school spirit and wish the teams good luck." Dito said. "Getting the fans rided up at the basketball games was great."

>>Two. To get her ready for practice Justin Luebcke (II) tapes up an athlete. Taping ankles was just one of the many jobs the student athlete trainer's had to do daily. Many athletes relied on the trainer's to prevent injury. "The best part about being a student athletic trainer is the people you work with and the people you meet." Justin said.

Trainers/Managers - Imagine yourself spending hours at school, hardly ever being in the spotlight. Imagine all your hard work going unnoticed and spending long hours with your particular sport, only to watch someone else get the glory. That was the job of the managers and trainers while putting in many hours on the job.

"Some of the daily duties that we were required to do included taping ankles. stocking medical kits, cleaning whirlpools, making ice bags, and assisting with rehabilitation with the athletes," sophomore Jessica Palfi said.

The duties of the managers also varied depending on the sport with tasks ranging from taking water out to the practice fields, to keeping score at a meet. Being part of the team made many feel the job was all worth it. "I really enjoyed being a trainer because I got to help out and be a part of something bigger than myself," sophomore Josh Long said.

Dog Crew - Hyping up the fans is not only the job of the cheerleaders, but the Dog Crew as well. The Dog Crew attended home events to help get the Superfans excited and pepped

"We went to all the games at home, and we tried to make the crowd cheer wildly," junior Amanda Parker said. The dog crew was responsible for getting the hallways and cafeteria decorated for many of the games

"The Dog Crew promoted the school's spirit by putting up banners and wishing the teams good luck," Dito Sanchez said.

>>One. While walking past the super fans lead by Ryan Forney (12), Amanda Parker, in costume, (11) works to get create spirit for the game. "It was fun to go to all the home games and get the crowd wild and cheering," Amanda said. Mixing in with the crowd and participating in the chanting helped the crowd get more into the game. Creating a fun atmosphere for the super fans was the goal for all the members of the dog crew. Dancing, interacting with the fans, and taking pictures with the little kids, as well as the students, created an interesting experience.

>>Two. Taking the basketballs off the court after the team warm up, Brice Anderson (10) prepares for the start of the game. Most of the managers' work was done either prior to the games or during practices. "During a typical practice. we had to set up the practice clock, and get the basketballs out," Brice said. The managers were also responsible for making sure that all the proper equipment was stored on the bus and ready in good working order for the away competitions. "We made sure we had the printer for the Three. Mitchell Adducci (9) makes an ice bag or an athlete. Making ice bags was just one of the many daily duties that student trainers had. Making up to 20 ice bags a day was not uncommon. "I had to tape ankles, fill and clean the whirlpools, fill any water coolers needed for the day, and help players with rehab," Mitchell said. Trainers were an essential part of the season for each athletic team >>Four. Setting the horse to the right level, Alex Nelson (12) and Philipp Buergy (12) help the gymnastics meets to go smoother. Some managers wanted to be a part of the team so that they could join in during practices. "One of the reasons that I wanted to be a manager was because I could join in during practice and try to keep myself in shape, Philipp Buergy said.

in front of the bench. Getting water ready for a game and keepi up the bench area was one of his tasks. "I helped to make the job of the coaches easier, and I made sure the players were hydrated." Ethan said. "One of the best things about being a manager was that I loved being a part of the team." Ethan was also allowed to dress in un the last regular season game against Chesterton.

German & French Club

Members discover interest in foreign culture

German Club- From creating a cardboard mountain to learning how to cook German cuisine, German Club had many distinctive cultural activities that differentiated it from other clubs.

"While making the cardboard mountains, (of the German Terrain) we had a duct tape fight," freshman Ashley Young said. "Somehow, Lederhosen (pants) always ended up in the conversation."

"We had Oktoberfest and St. Nicholas Day," freshman Heather DiGiacomo said. "Oktoberfest was one big party."

Another cultural difference concerned St. Nicholas Day. The Germans put candles on their Christmas trees instead of the traditional colored lights American use to decorate. In addition they fill shoes instead of stockings. "We got candy in our shoes," Heather added.

At meetings, the group sometimes watched movies and listened to music to acquire more knowledge about the German culture. -By Heather Smith

French Club-There was always an abundance of celebrations, food experiences, and new information during French Club meetings, according to its members.

"I liked being a part of French Club because we always had so many parties. Also, being able to try all the new and different types of food was awesome," junior Sarah Shaaban said.

During her third year as an active member of the club, Sarah was named French Club president. While the club consisted of many veteran members, an equal number of new members joined.

"This was my third year of French, but it was actually only my first year as an official member," junior Jasmin Tate said. "I was surprised to see how much I benefited from attending the activities and hearing all of the songs. Also, actually tasting the food first-hand helped me to remember the culture more easily than just reading about it."

-By Devin Holme

>>One. (10/II) While at Cale Fondue, Jeri Grevis (9) and Mrs. Linda Atwood (French/Spanish) awalt their meal "One of my favorite parts about French Club was that we always did something with food," Jeri said. "It was definitely satisfying."

>>Two. (10/6) In the Homecoming Parade. Nic Adams (12) displays the German flag. "One funny thing that happened was Sam, the vice president, always tried to take over the position of president," Nic said. "We also wished frau (Ms. Katie Smoltino) a 'Happy 40th' when she wasn't even 30 yet."

>>Three. (3/4) At Staatskongress, Heather DiGiacomo (9), Ashley Young (9), and Lauren Quinn (10) listen closely to speakers. "We wasted two days making cardboard mountains, only to never use them." Heather said.

>>Four (3/29) While watching the talent show at the medieval banquet. Shelly Kiefer (12) and Jennifer Reid (12) enjoy the entertainment. "The talent show was really funny." Shelly said. "My favorite act was when Jared Hayes performed karate."

>>Five. (3/4) At Staatskongress, members stand around Mrs. Kathe Smoltino (German). Staatskongress was similar to a student council, though only for German students. Once a year, the members of Staatskongress traveled to Ball State to meet and compare their German Club activities.

>> Six. (2/20) During the Mardi Gras party, Sarah Shaaban (11), Krystal Krokroskia (12), and Mrs. Linda Atwood (frenchi/Spanish) play a game of Mancala. "It was the first time we had a Mardi Gras party." Krystal said. "It was a good change of pace to dress up and wear the traditional masks."

Spanish & Japanese Club

Language groups experience culture

Spanish Club- As people began dancing to "The Salsa" and trying the unfamiliar tastes of different food, being part of the Spanish Club became about more than just learning a new language.

"It was something extra to do, but it was also an opportunity to meet new people, and be a part of a different culture," Mr. Gonzalez (Spanish) said.

Between new food, a new language, and new customs, members of the Spanish Club were able to form a bond by learning about a culture that was drastically different from their own. By Joey McColley

Japanese Club- Imagine yourself in a different environment, a different culture, where you would learn about origami, and learn a language that uses calligraphy.

"We learned so much, not only about the language, but also the culture," senior Alex Alvarez said.

During meetings, the group played DDR, ate Ramen Noodles, or watched anime.

"Every time I went to the club, I had fun. I was never bored, and learned something every time," freshman Jonathan O'Hora Tschopp said. "We didn't just sit around, and those who weren't in Japanese were included." -By Heather Smith

>>One. (10/6) Representing Japanese Club on the homecoming float. Dane Mettam (12) plays his role. "We put a lot of hard work into our float." Dane said. "It was fun waving at people and yelling out various Japanese phrases."

>>Two. (3/27) At foreign Language Fortnight. Alex VanGorp (9) serves himself Singapore Mei-fun. "I helped by putting the food out for Mrs. Nori Wachowski (Foreign Language)," Alex said. "It was great to see so many people enjoy foreign food."

>>Three. (10/6) Zack Hill (II) and Asad Ahmed (II) walk through the cheering crowd of kids. They were happy to show the spirit of Spanish Club. "I did the 'parade of pride' because I wanted to show that Spanish Club could be fun." Zack said.

>>Four. (12/9) On the bus to Chicago, Anni Chan (9) and Adam Caldwell (9) sit together for the Foreign Language Field Trip. "It was a blissful morning with the 'spiffiest' person 1 know." Adam said. "And sharing the trip to Chicago was all I could ever ask for."

>>Five. (10/6) Around late afternoon, Mr. Gonzalez (foreign Language), Zack Hill (II), and Sonya DuBernard (9) display their Spanish Club sign. "It was very stressful. a little embarrassing, but all together it was a lot of fun." Sonya said.

>>Six. (10/6) With the stress of getting the Spanish Club float finished. Nikkue Patrick (9) takes in the joy of getting the crowed pumped for the upcoming game. "It was fun throwing candy to the little kids and just getting everyone pumped for the Homecoming game." Nikkie said.

Latin Club

Members reign first at state convention

They were hard to miss, as it wasn't uncommon that they wore togas and greeted with a "Salve."

wore togas and greeted with a "Salve."

"My favorite part about Latin club was the spirit days...

especially Toga Friday," junior Sean Polacek said.

Throughout the year the Latin club worked to benefit the school as well as the community with a Krispy Kreme fundraiser beginning October 24, adopt-a-highway clean-up in September, October, April, and May, and gift wrapping at Barnes & Noble on December 22.

All of their hard work and dedication paid off with a trip to the Indiana Junior Classical League Convention on March 10. At the convention, schools from around Indiana gathered in Bloomington at Indiana University to compete in various contests and competitions.

Students won eleven individual achievement trophies in academics, graphic arts, and creative arts. In addition, all three levels of the Certamen teams advanced to the final rounds.

The lower and upper teams placed second, while the novice level team placed first and won the title of State Champions. Also, the students were pleased to return home with the yellow megaphone, which marked them as the winners of the delegation spirit competition.

They also acquired the Helen Wampler Spirt Competition and placed fourth with their scrapbook. For the first time in Mr. Jeremy Walker's career, they brought home the first place publicity trophy.

"Indiana is a highly competitive state in publicity, often taking several of the top ten spots in the national competition, so we were very excited to have won," Mr. Walker said.

Overall, the group scored more than 3,000 points, double the score of the second place team.

"The best activity this year was the state convention. I got to spend a lot of time with my friends," junior Jon Glass said. - By Devon Holme

>>One. (9/23) Dunng a general meeting. Jon Glass (11) and Chns Miller (11) discuss the upcoming events in which they will participate. "I looked floward to latin Club a lot. We always managed to have a good laugh and had a lot of fur during our meetings." Chris said. Meetings were held every Friday in the courtyard or small group instruction room.

>>Two, (2/23) While taking a break during a general meeting. Welsey Wood (i) of shows off a visual arts entry, for the State Latin Convention to Angela Langley-Lesnik (iii). "The State Convention was the best because we got to choose from a bunch of different groups to compete in Almost everybody chose to create a piece of Latin-inspired artwork." Angela said

>>Three. (11/11) To celebrate President's Day, Jake Libasaks (12) Assar Malik (11), and Kevin Jacobs (11) build miniature catapult models at Homestead High School. "On President's Day we went to the school of the Indiana Junior Classical League president. We learned a lot about how catapults were built and how they functioned." Yassir saud. "SFOur. (12/22) On their first day of Christmas break. Jon Glass (11) and Wesley Wood (10) volunteer to giftwrap at Barnes and Noble. "It was very revaiding to know that I was helping out both my community and my fellow students," Jon said. The giftwrap benefitted the Indiana Junior Classical League Scholarship Fund and was held from 2.00 to 8:00 P.M.

>> Five. (9/23) A lively group of members takes a break and dances during a general meeting. When the weather permitted, meetings were held in the courtyard. At this informal Friday meeting, members enjoyed themselves with food and drink and took a break from their usual work.

>>Six. (2/23) Leading a general meeting. Mr. Jeremy Walker discusses the activities and rules that will apply the following day at the Indiana Junior Classical League State Convention. Mr. Walker was very active in the state with the league. He was even named teacher of the year previously.

Speech, Debate, Academic Decathlon

Researching data, practicing strenuous speeches and having some hilarious moments encompassed the speech, debate and academic decathlon teams. Even with a demanding schedule of constant study and memorization, each academic team placed well.

Speech/Debate Team With only nine students, Speech snatched up fourth place at the LaPorte Invitational. Overall, Debate placed fifth at District National Qualifying Tournament and 12th at State. Awards for the All-State team were distributed to seniors Caroline Diamond, James Freeman, and Caitlin Johnston.

Academic Decathlon "Academic Decathlon placed 11th in the state for large schools, missing the chance to go to state by 75 points," sponsor Dana Zurbriggen (Spanish) said.

Brainiacs battle for top ranking

One might have perceived these teams to be "geeky" and "boring," however, the teams shared some very amusing stories. For instance, on the debate team's first meet, the bus driver hit a deer when all of the team was sleeping.

"We all woke up with a jolt, and we heard the bus driver laughing. When we got off the bus later, there was still fur caught on the front of the bus," junior Yasir Malik said.

When Academic Decathlon traveled to Chicago, they visited the Art Museum, the Field Museum, and Chinatown,

"Mrs. Zurbriggen made a song of all the ridiculous things that happened. We sang the song on the way back as I shouted 'Oh, look, hey, shoes," senior Sarah Burke said.

-By Hayley Hanes

>>Two. (4/21) Boasting in laughter about politics. James ferenan (1/2) addresses his most pleasurable moments in Debate. "Being able to speak last in the first half of the final round.) was pretty much able to refute any of the opponents points, so I made a couple comments. I told her. "I'm sorry senator. Oscar nominations are closed. This isn't a display performance," James said. James placed soith at state.

">"Three. (2/23) At a rehearsal session for Debate, Abdullah Malik (11) takes a break from memorizing his lines. "It was strange to have different advisors for Speech and Debate this year. I wasn't used to seeing Mrs. (Tammy) Daugherty for only one of the two practices." Abdullah said.

>>Four. ($/16) John Stangel (12) and Sasha Neri-Dufour (11) discuss Chinese literature for Academic Decathlon.
"Every year there's a different topic for Decathlon: this year it was China. To get ourselves into the "China mood" we'd order in Chinese food to eat during practices. We also watched the Joy Luck Culb at one of our first meetings to observe cultural differences. I was never one to argue against watching a movie and having some good food." Jon said.

>> Five. (5/16) While discussing the novel The Qood Earth (700 Decathlon, Alex VanGorp (10) and Angela Langlie-Lesnik (11) enjoy the weather outside. "Decathlon was one of my favorite activities because we had such a small team. This made the preparation for the competition a lot of fun because we really got to know our teammates," Angela said.

>>Six. (5/18) During lunch, debate member Maryam Khalid (12) works on her presentation. "Northwest Indiana was the most competitive area for speech and debate; once you did well here you knew you would do well at the state competition. I loved the competitive attitude everybody had." Maryam said.

>>Seven. (5/18) Preparing for her subjects of art. music. language and literature. Alison Hamilton (10) shows her enthusiasm for Academic Decathlon. "I loved Academic Decathlon the most because we had the most unique and quirky group of students; they made everything so fun and exciting," Allison said.

Academic Quiz Bowl, Spell Bowl, Super Bowl

Bowl teams devote hours to practice

Though they never wore jerseys or ran sprints, the members of Academic Super Bowl, Quiz Bowl, and Spell Bowl insisted they were just like any other extracurricular team at school. Quiz Bowl "Everybody generally assumed that the members of the Quiz Bowl team never put in much effort, but we practiced and competed just like any other team," senior Kristy Bielak Members met every Monday after school to discuss random facts and run through practice questions. Overall, they finished second in the tournament.

Spell Bowl Likewise, Spell Bowl members insisted that they were more than just a small-scale group of students obsessed with academics.

"As soon as you admitted to joining an academic team you were labeled as a nerd with no life outside of school; in reality, we always had a lot of fun," senior Jeff Kors said.

"I think everybody would be surprised to see that we weren't tightly wound and obsessive about school," he added.

During their competition at Merrillville, the Spell Bowl team spelled nine out of ten words correctly.

Super Bowl The Academic Super Bowl team was unique in the fact that members chose in which competition they wanted to compete.

"I competed on the fine arts and English teams. I actually chose to join Academic Super Bowl because it was sort of a tradition in my family. My older sister always competed on Academic teams, and I was hooked from the time I attended my first meeting," senior John Stangel said.

Every Wednesday, members met in Mr. Jason McGee's (Math) room and studied packets of information he printed out.

"The packets varied depending on which subject you competed in. We also did a lot of research on the computers to prepare ourselves," freshman Stephanie Krause said.

The Academic Super Bowl team won two firsts and a third in the DAC competition.

>>Six. (5/1) Leading a Quiz Bowl practice. Mr Flewelling prepares to begin a practice round of questions. "Practices were pretty helpful because we just went over tons and tons of practice questions: It also helped that Jon Glass always knew what he was doing; he helped out the team a lot." Stephen Modrowski (12) said. Stephen was also a member of Spell Bowl and Academic Super Bowl.

It really kicked varsity," Sarah said.

Inklings Newspaper

Staff expresses thoughts through words

Inklings Thinking of interesting story ideas, going on express my own thoughts and rant about subjects that I felt interviews, writing articles, staying after school for production nights, and surviving deadline week were only a few steps that Inkling's staffers, lead by editors Caitlin Johnston and Beth Iddings, had to complete for each monthly issue.

"Sometimes deadline week got pretty hectic; it usually involved last minute adjustments to stories, pictures, and page designs, but somehow at the end it all worked out," junior Sarah Shaaban said.

Each person had their own favorite aspect of belonging on the staff. In the case of senior Sadie Williams, it was expressing herself through her writing.

"I liked writing opinion columns because I was able to strongly about," Sadie said.

Likewise, senior Bryanna Firchau had her own opinion about the best part of newspaper.

"The best part of being on staff was being able to use my intelligence and creativity in class," Bryanna said.

Although there was an immense amount of hard work and stress involved in assembling the paper each month, creative director and senior Joe Lukawski held his time in newspaper close to his heart.

"Newspaper was always my outlet; it was a tool I could us to focus my creative energy and put my soul on a page," Joe said. -By Milijana Trisic

>>One. While at Ball State's Journalism Day, Joe Lukawski (12) prepares to take a photo. "J-Day was a good time to get closer with my staff and learn from professionals. It was a nice break from the monotony of a regular week in the J-lab," Joe said. Joe was the creative director for the newspaper.

>>Two. Looking through a reference book, Anthony Nelson (12) finds information. "In order to write a good story. had to research to make sure that all my information was accurate." Anthony said.

>>Three. Reading a returned questionnaire, staffers Megan Binder (10) and Andjela Tarailo (10) discuss what quote they should use for their story. "Our story, Image, required us to interview different kinds of students," Andjela said. "It was interesting to see the different opinions that everyone had when it came to appearance," Megan said. Both Andjela and Megan were new staffers.

>>Four. Finishing her story, Jaclyn Altpeter (11) stays after school for production night. "Production nights were always fun. We stayed pretty late in the evening and people were very entertaining, but the best part was the food and spending time with the staff," Jaclyn said. Inklings had multiple production nights, and each lasted for a couple of hours The staffer's moms took turns bringing in food for everyone.

>> Five. Joking around, Brian DeRuntz (11), Jenn Bane (11). and Nicci Brown (11) take a break from writing their stories. "One of the main parts of the newspaper class included communication between the photographers and the editors." Brian said. "My job was to discuss the photo assignments and infographics with the person who was designing the page so that the picture matched what was going on in the story." he added.

>>Six. Entertaining the staff. James Freeman (12) spins around on the computer chair. "I tried to make everyday fun and different for everyone," James said. James was the staff's copy editor.

>>Seven. While pointing to the story board poster, Sadie Williams (12) informs the staff of their deadlines. "Story assignments were usually handed out one month before we went to press. We would get together as a class and volunteer for stories." Sadie said.

>>four. (4/17) During Mrs. Lisa Landgrebe's and Mr. Brent Barber's second hour Mass Media class, Maria Ficker (11) puts a recorded tape back into a camera after correcting it on one of the eight editors. "My favorite part of putting together Showtime was working on the editors. It was really cool to see how you could take multiple shots and turn it into one shot that was really good. Also, it was nice not to have to do a perfect recording. All you had to do was piece together the parts of the shot that you liked," Maria said. >>five. (10/2) At the Homecoming pep rally, Amanda Walters (12) tapes the Homecoming highlights segment. "Sometimes, instead of sitting or cheering in the crowd with your friends, you had to be taping the game or the event so other people could enjoy the highlights or see the game, if they missed out," Amanda said. "I really did not mind because the show always looked good when it came out the

Showtime

Program wins recognition for excellence

Showtime "5, 4, 3, Shh, 2, 1." The famous words that began the taping of any film, or in this case, the award winning television program, Showtime.

At Ball State's Journalism Day, Showtime won awards in each division in which they submitted entries.

"This was the first year that we entered in five categories and won an honorable mention in each category. We were happy with what we accomplished this year," said Mrs. Lisa Landgrebe, the group's faculty adviser.

In the sports news category, junior Marija Radiceska won. Senior Ana Radiceska received an award for her Bulldog Bulletin" segment. Junior Matt Fronek won for his segment on Halloween. For her package piece for the Christmas season, junior Lynn Stanko was recognized, and for their sports play-by-play segment, seniors Will Theodoros and Nick Zolfo received honors. In addition to the J-Day awards, Showtime received a third place award at the Indianapolis Convention

The awards received were not the only aspect of the program that increased from past years. The Mass Media class enrollment also increased by over 25 percent. These additional numbers caused some problems for the staff.

"It was really hard to get tasks accomplished because three or four people were assigned to the one of the eight editors during one class period, so that could be frustrating at times," senior Kiely Schlesinger said.

Showtime, solely student-produced, aired twice a week on Channel 26, Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. and Thursday at 6:00 p.m..

"I usually had to spend a couple hours a week editing and cutting segments down, but everyone was so supportive, so it was not that big of a deal to have to spend time outside of class," senior James Freeman said. James was on staff 1st semester only. - By Nicole Akey

Excalibur, Quill & Scroll

Journalists honored for work, dedication

Quill and Scroll- "It was really great that we were being inducted into a prestigious society that upholds student journalism rights and standards," senior Melissa Machay said.

Quill and Scroll honored journalism students who had served two or more years on publications, placed in the top third of their class, and received a recommendation from their advisors.

On May 6, senior Beth Iddings, Quill and Scroll President, inducted seven staff members from both Excalibur and Inklings staffs during the annual publications banquet held at the Patio Restaurant. Juniors Jenn Bane and Jaclyn Altpeter earned enough votes to succeed her as president.

"It was an honor to be voted by my peers; and it was also an honor to share the position with Jaclyn," Jenn said.

Excalibur- Between chaotic schedules, working on pages, going on photo shoots, and a new adviser, the Excalibur staff learned to work together and made all of their deadlines.

"We all came from different families and backgrounds, but we learned to care for each other and help each other out during times of need," senior Heather Smith said.

Despite the constant rush of deadlines, the staff found time to have fun and enjoy each other's company. Every Friday they took turns bringing in cookies, and brought in treats for staff member's birthdays.

"It really made me smile when people brought in cookies on Cookie Friday," freshman Sammy Vercellino said.

Two staff members also traveled to Nashville, Tennessee for the NSPA/JEA National Journalism convention. While there, the staff's 2006 book won ninth in the Best of Show competition.

Staffers remembered one deadline night when they started a "Rock Paper, Scissors" competition headed by senior Adam Merkel.

"It was a shame that we never got a chance to finish the tournament Adam said. "Since it was at the beginning of the year, it would have been a great ice breaker for the editors and staffers."

>>one. (5/6) Reading the script from the ceremonial induction speech Beth Iddings (12) inducts new members to Quill and Scroll while other members Kran McVer (11) and Nicci Brown (11) help. "It was a great honor being nominated as Quill and Scroll president by my classmates." Beth said.

>>two. (12/4) Shannon Compton (11) works diligently on her page during fifth hour. "Trying to complete a page to complete a page to a lat of determination and dedication." Shannon said. "The finished product was worth the time put into the pages."
>>three. (2/5) Student life editor Meghan Frost (12) gives Excalibur's youngest staff member, locy McColley, (9) an inquisitive look. "When I was going though my writing process for a story, I'd roll around the classroom and chew on my pencil." Joey said. Joey also mentioned that Excellibur helped him learn to be more organized and taught him how to deal with stress.

>>Five. (12/19) Alter school during the Excellibur Christmas partyllapout night, editors Adam Merkel and Melissa Machay (12) talk about current events. "Deadline nights were halianos because everyone was so stressed out and practically incoherent." Melissa said. "The food at deadline night always helped relieve some of the stress because it gave everyone a chance to relak for a little bit."

>>six. (4/20) On the way back to the high school from J day at Ball State University. John Newberry (12) and Milligiana Trisic (10) talk while drinking milk shakes. "J-day was a great experience because the staff members got to get to know each other one-on-one." Jon said. J-day is a program that Ball State University holds every year for high school journalism students is surrounding states.

>>seven. (4/20) Preparing herself to take a picture of other staff members on the bus. Nicole Aley (12) (occuse the camera. "The Ball State trips were interesting to say the least, but out of the three years I attended, this year was the best year ever," Nicole said. The staff used two different types of cameras: a Nikon D100 and a Nikon D70.

Local businesses became the heart of the community while supplying students with jobs and supporting sports teams, student publications, and drama events.

"I started working at the Disney store in order to save money for prom," senior Kaitlin Sapita said. "But once prom was over, I started saving up for college. Also, the extra cash I had was nice."

Besides employing students, businesses also donated funds, products and services for school events and activities. Kessler Team Sports sponsored a football camp for kids, ages 5 to 11, ran by varsity football players. They donated T-shirts, water bottles, and other accessories for the camp. State representative Robert Kuzman also provided T-shirts for the camp.

"Many businesses donated supplies for the camp," senior Andrew Krumwied said. "The funds we received really helped the camp."

In addition, local businesses offered discounts for community members and students through the use of the Go Card, a $10 card sold through Tri Kappa. The Wedding Shoppe, other dress boutiques, and salons offered discounts on services. The proceeds from the sales of cards went directly back to the school.

While many students supported local businesses, local businesses also supported the school through students employment, donations and sponsorships.

At Borders, Katie Oresko
(II) browses the magazine section. "I loved looking at the magazines because of the extensive selection." Katie said.

Kaitlyn Edwards (12) sends thank you cards to local businesses who donated Prom dresses for Kaitlyn's AP English Personal Impact Project.

Superintendant Eineman and Mrs. Julie Woodburn (Media) announce the winners of the reading contest, Organizations donated the prizes.

While grilling a Panini, Sadie Williams (12) works at The Coffee Cup. "I got to work with a lot of people I knew from school," Sadie said.

Editors' Notes

Three years in publications. Two years serving as Editorin-Chief. 9th in the nation. 2 different "moms." Countless friends.

Yearbook was random, to say the least. You never did know what you were to be encountered with, like Mrs. O saying that more pages were needed for the deadline due in two days, the latest Paris update from James, Devin freaking out about Cookie Friday, a new picture in Melissa's frame, or Bryzy attacking you.

Three years ago when I filled out the application for yearbook I was unaware that I was actually joining a family, a crazy, dysfunctional family, but a family no less.

For the past three years, that family supported me, made me laugh, and was always there when I needed a hug, some comforting words, or an oatmeal creme pie.

And now, as I clean out my cubbie, pack up my coffee cup, leave the "Cozy Corner" and the "Journalism Nest," along with half of my family, I know that the other half of our family that is left behind will carry on our awesomeness.:) I love all of you guys, and you made this book amazing!

Muchos love, Nicole Akey :)

For the first time, words are beyond me. I don't think I could ever accurately describe my experiences on staff. my gratitude, or my lessons learned, but I'll try without sounding too cliché. Journalism defined high school for me. Since freshman year I had been writing stories and taking photos. By senior year, I had taken it farther - I was stalking people for quotes, designing pages, traveling across the nation to journalism conventions, and fulfilling editor duties. However, yearbook was not only an outlet for my creativity or just a class I spent time in for three hours a day, it was my family. I had spent more time with the staffers and Mrs. O than most of my family and shared more secrets with the entire staff than my best friends. Whether or not everyone wanted to hear about my newest crush or silly drama, however, is debatable. Nonetheless, I'm exceedingly proud of this book and the entire staff for their dedication and abilities. I cannot take credit for most of the accomplishments and successes because it was undeniably a team effort. This book is marvelous and we had an amazing time making it, even if somebody forgot to bring cookies on Cookie Friday or a mysterious hacker deleted our files.

Thank you. Melissa Machay

Class of 2007 eraduation

Seniors toss hats in celebration.

As the first class to walk the halls of the "new" high school for their entire four years, the class of 2007 also became the first class in six years to toss their hats after the traditional turning of the tassels.

James Freeman, senior class president, spoke of the changes the graduates have the opportunity to make to improve the world. He recalled memories from the four years, like the school's motivational speaker who repeated the word "perseverance" over and over, and the CP 1,2,3 writing format that had been ingrained into the students' minds.

Valedictorian Sarah Griffis suggested that each graduate search out their strengths and overcome their weaknesses, like her fear of public speaking, while Tom Tokoly, salutatorian, encouraged his class to define success for themselves and live their own lives instead of other's.

After everyone took their final walk across the stage, Shelly Keifer, Student Council president, quoted Hercules, and reminded everyone to "go the distance."

Starting a new tradition, Jon Parry conducted the orchestra as it played the school fight song. Finishing with a final "BJK" (Initials for teacher Bernie J. Kowalski) chant, the seniors celebrated their last moments as bulldogs. Mr. Ryan Pitcock (Principal) ended his speech with his famous phrase, "Make it a great day to be a Bulldog." -By Kara McIver and Devin Holme

Bobbie Ferrel-Brey, Bryanna Firchau, Alaina Hochstetler, and Jacob Hoffman prepare to throw their caps for the first time during Mr. Pitcock's tenure as principal. At practice he told the class that it had not been done in several years. "It didn't feel real until it was all over." said Bobbie.

Although the year was coming to an end, the numbers that we experienced throughout the long school days continued to pop up in our lives.

Five-hundred and thirty-nine seniors were eager to leave behind their scores from UBD, SAT, ACT, and AP tests for the final time. However, they still had numbers to worry about in the future. College tuition, book fees, car payments, cell phone bills, and rent were just a few of the many numbers that they would soon encounter.

Over 1750 underclassmen kept important dates in mind, such as those for standardized tests, athletic practices, and college visits. Their time spent at practices, school, and completing numerous tests would still continue next year.

Until then, however, over ninety days of summer freedom was a hand...ninety days of the seeing friends, sleeping late, going to the beach, attending open houses, and spending time on family vacations.

Statistics, data, dates, census, time and revenue; all those Numbers. They said so much about us. Actually, they defined who we were and what we were about.

about Excalibur volume 91

Excalibur, Volume 91, was produced by the yearbook staff at Crown Point High School in Crown Point, Indiana and printed at Herff Jones Yearbook in Shawnee Mission, Kansas. The account was serviced by Lisa Keene and Lisa Merino. The cover concept was developed by Meghan Frost, Melissa Machay, and Katie Wefler with the help of Herff Jones artist David Smith. The theme "Numbers" was developed by Nicole Akey and the Excalibur editorial staff. The endsheet designs were developed and produced in Adobe InDesign CS2 by Melissa Machay. The book's 280 pages were printed on 80 pound Bordeaux. The body copy was 10 to 12 pt AHJ Garamond; captions were 9 pt AHI Goudy Sans; headlines ranged 30 pt to 110 pt AHI Molehill. AHJ Souvenier, or AHJ Goudy Sans. The staff created the pages in Adobe InDesign CS2 and the book was produced on 22 Dell Pentium 4 Processors. Pictorial coverage was provided by staff photographers, Titak Photography, and Visual Sports Network. Titak also presented the senior pictures while the underclassmen were presented by HR Imaging. A total of 1,175 copies were pre-sold ranging from $49-59. The Excalibur is a member of the Indiana High School Press Association, the National Scholastic Press Association, the Columbia Scholastic Press Association, JEA and Quill and Scroll.
